REV. DR. BUTTERS PASSES AWAY

Most Beloved and Popular Clergyman Dead, After a Short Illness

Rev. Dr. George S. Butters, one of the most beloved residents of this city, died early Monday morning at his home on Newtonville avenue, Newton, from heart trouble, after an illness of about a month.

Dr. Butters was one of the best known clergymen in the Methodist denomination and had been in active work for over forty years. He had served as pastor of the Newtonville church for three years, 1887 to 1890, as pastor of the Newton Church for seven years, 1905-1912, and as pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church at Auburndale for nine years, 1912-1921.

Dr. Butters was born in Lowell in 1856 and was graduated from Boston University School of Theology in 1881 with a degree of bachelor of sacred theology. In 1903 he received an honorary degree of doctor of sacred theology from Lawrence College, Wis.

He was elected a trustee of Boston University in 1908 and in 1911 was made secretary of the board. He held that position until last year, when he resigned because of the press of duties and failing health.

In 1912 he became a special lecturer of the faculty of the School of Theology, then he became an instructor and later librarian of the school. In 1918 he became professor of practical theology at the University School of Religious Education and Social Service.

He is survived by his widow, one son, Mr. Edgar S. Butters of Boston and a daughter, Miss Marion Butters of New Jersey.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon, at the Newton Methodist Church, which was filled with the many friends of Dr. Butters.

Dean James A. Beeb of Boston University School of Theology officiated, assisted by Rev. Charles F. Rice, D. D., of Medford, a retired preacher and lifelong friend of Dr. Butters. The Lotus Quartet sang "Eternal Goodness," "Abide with Me" and "Tell Me the Story of Jesus," and Miss Elsa M. Leonard, parish organist, played many old hymns, favorites of Dr. Butters.

The honorary pallbearers were Rev. William E. Huntington, D. D., of Newton Centre, former president of Boston University; Rev. Ernest Herrick of Roslindale; Rev. Henry L. Wriston of Boston; Rev. George T. Spencer, D. D., secretary of the Massachusetts Bible Society; Rev. A. M. Osmond of Somerville and Rev. Marcus Jewell of the faculty of Boston University.

At the committal in the family lot in the Lowell Cemetery, Lowell, Rev. J. West Thompson, present pastor of the Newton church officiated.

CENSUS COMPLETED

City Clerk Frank M. Grant has completed the census of the city as required by the state law and reports a grand total of 53,364 a gain of 7,310 over the national census of 1920. Ward 5 shows the greatest increase, with a gain of 2,474 over five years ago, due probably to the rapid growth of Waban. Ward 2 with a total of 10,225 has the largest population while Ward 7 with 5,099 is the smallest.

Mr. Grant has also filed with the state secretary a statement showing the number of legal voters in the city which will be used by the Legislature in redistricting the senatorial and councillor districts of the state, the Supreme Court having recently rendered a decision that legal voters and not population should be the determining factor.

The following tables give the details of the census:

BIG BUILDING BOOM

That Newton is experiencing a live and active building boom is manifested by the report of the Building Commissioner for the month of June. For the first time in the history of the city, the building permits issued during a month exceed one million dollars, the figure for June, standing at $1,233,245, of which $572,700 is for 54 single dwellings, $376,000 for double dwellings. The figures for June make a grand total for the year of $6,672,347, as compared with $3,363,793, for a corresponding period last year.

WOLCOTT-TYLER

Miss Elizabeth Tyler, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Harry W. Tyler of Newton Centre, was married at noon last Saturday in Trinity Church to Mr. Wallace Wolcott, son of Mrs. Marion D. Wolcott, formerly of Ithaca but now of Utica, N. Y., and the late David Clinton Wolcott. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edward T. Sullivan.

The altar of the church was banked with blue delphinium and pink rambler roses and the same color scheme was carried out in the bride's bouquet which was of blue delphinium, Ward roses and baby's breath.

The only attendant was the bride's younger sister, Miss Genevieve Tyler. Following the ceremony a luncheon was served to the guests who were all immediate relatives, at the home of the bride's parents on Gray Cliff road.

After a wedding trip to the White Mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott will make their home in New York City after August 1st.

The bride was a member of the 1915 class of Mt. Holyoke College, and afterwards studied art in Boston. The groom is a graduate of Cornell, Class of 1915.

CAMP FIRE NEWS

The Chas. R. Channay group of Camp Fire Girls held their annual outing Tuesday, June 23. They took the sail on the "Dorothy Bradford" to Provincetown. Those who went were Ruth C. Filene, Margaret H. Stover, Lois G. Potter, Estelle Cyr, Marion Welt, Mrs. W. H. Stover, Virginia Christie, a guest, and Nancy W. Meehan.

The group has held its last business meeting at which the girls told of their plans for the summer.

Ruth C. Filene will attend Camp Co-wasset, North Falmouth. Marion Welt will be at her summer home at Onset and will visit in Long Island, Lake Winnepesaukee. Lois G. Potter, Margaret H. Stover, Mrs. W. H. Stover, Barbara Dobyns, and Nancy W. Meehan will go to Camp Kiwanis, South Hanson. Mildred Curless is at her summer home in Hull. Estelle Cyr and Mary Gallagher will remain in Newtonville at their respective homes. The Camp Fire Girls of Newtonville are having a delightful summer.

$25000 FOR HOSPITAL

Mrs. Josiah E. Bacon of West Newton has given to the Newton Hospital $25,000 to be used in the building and equipping of a separate room or ward in the most modern hospital style in memory of her husband Josiah Eaton Bacon, and his mother, Mary Lloyd Bacon. In her letter to Dr. Irving J. Fisher, through whom her gift was made known to the trustees of the hospital Mrs. Bacon says that in view of the contemplated building programme of the hospital it may be wise to delay the use of the money for building until the memorial ward or room can be made a part of some one of the new buildings and that if the trustees decide such delay to be wise then the gift is to be held as a memorial fund in memory of Josiah Eaton Bacon and his mother Mary Lloyd Bacon and the income to be used until such time as the fund shall be needed for building.

In the meantime Mrs. Bacon suggests that a fitting memorial tablet be erected which can be transferred from its temporary location to the ward or room when built. As to the use of the income from the memorial fund until it shall be needed for building Mrs. Bacon in her letter said:—"It is difficult, sometimes unwise, to make distinctions and draw lines between different classes of people who need help, yet when the desire to help a certain class to the exclusion of others exists, it is a satisfaction to know that charitable instincts of donors are as varied as the recipients and thus no classes are neglected. I am particularly interested in the so-called "middle class" of young people who frequently in early married life require medical aid particularly at the time of their first born and it is such people whom I desire to help and for whom this Memorial Room or Ward and this Memorial Fund shall be used, under the direction and the discretion of the trustees. During my life I should wish to reserve the right to nominate the persons who should occupy the room or have the benefit of the income of the fund, and at my death I desire this privilege to revert to my son William Hope Bacon any unused income from the fund at the end of any fiscal year may be used for the general purposes of the hospital."

MR. MELCHER RESIGNS

Mr. James B. Melcher, for the past fourteen years a valued officer of the Newton Trust Company resigned on July 1st as clerk of the corporation, as an assistant treasurer and as manager of the Newton Centre Office of the company. Mr. Melcher has purchased a farm and camp in Orleans and will make that town his future home.

At a meeting of the directors of the company Mr. Melcher was presented with a fine gold watch and chain, the gift of the directors, and it was presented by President Seward W. Jones. Mr. Melcher was also presented with a fitted travelling bag by his associates in the company.

PLAYGROUND SEASON BEGINS

Supervised Play to Begin Next Week All Over the City

All the Newton Playgrounds will be under full time supervision from early morning hours to dark from now on. The last twelve weeks they were only partially supervised. In order that the parents may know that their children are safe and looked after and that they are instructed in sportsmanship and behavior, they ought to familiarize themselves with the playground and their directors and the special teachers and make personal visits. Parents are always welcome. Many of the playgrounds will offer restful recreation at all times, and during the time of the day when most children and young children may be expected, there will be two or more directors.

The Burr Playground offers opportunities for young and old with two men and two women directors. The Burr playground also offers plenty of opportunities for shower baths. The building contains one of the finest systems in the country. The playground is situated between Park Street and Waverly Avenue, next to the Bigelow School. Two Tennis courts belonging to the Hunnewell Club are used as auxiliary Tennis courts by the playground children and may be used by the public Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday. The Farlow Park playground is to be used only by little children. Any children over eight years of age are not allowed to play there. The pond offers wading, toy boating, etc., but no bathing is allowed in this pond. There is always somebody in charge and children will be looked after all day long. Ball play is not allowed on this playground.

The Playgrounds in Nonantum are the Boyd, Stearns, Allison, Victory Field and Hawthorn street playgrounds. Each of these playgrounds has accommodations for young and old except that older boys baseball is not allowed on the Stearns playground, since it is not large enough for baseball for boys over ten years of age.

In Newtonville, there is the Horace Mann Playground and Cabot Playground. The Cabot Playground is suitable for young and old. The Horace Mann Playground is limited for younger children for baseball play with a soft ball.

In West Newton: the Eden Avenue and the West Newton playgrounds are being supervised, and both places offer opportunities for young and old, except that on the Eden Avenue playground, boys above nine years are not allowed since it is to serve only young children and girls and women of all ages.

In Auburndale, the beautiful playground along the Pulsifer Cove, is a splendid one for young and old and offers particularly fine opportunities for picnics and field days. If it is necessary, a baby corner will be established on the Burr School Playground.

The Lower Falls, Waban, Upper Falls, Newton Highlands and Newton Centre Playgrounds offer opportunities for young and old. The Thompsonville Playground is limited to younger people, although parents are welcome, but is really too small to offer play for older boys.

All the bathing beaches are now under supervision throughout daylight. There are a number of directors at Crystal Lake, including a Matron. There are two guards taking charge and a Matron at the Allison playground. There are swimming instructors besides two guards on the Auburndale playground along the Charles River.

If the number of attendance on the Lower Falls Playground warrants it, the Metropolitan nearby Bathing beach will be supervised by the City of Newton. The bathing facilities in Upper Falls are under supervision and the water is fairly high this year, making bathing and swimming very pleasant.

Special attention will be given again this year to instruction in Occupation Play. The children will be taught to make useful things and a special program has been laid out for boys and for girls. In addition to the varied program we shall have this year, instruction in Millinery for the older girls by a regular Millinery teacher. For this Millinery class, the girls are urged to bring remnants of their cotton dresses. We will teach them to make hats to match their dresses.

This teacher will also, if there are enough applications, open classes in Millinery for Mothers, during the evening hours. Special hand play will be conducted in the Stearns playground and School building during the summer months. There are two women and one man instructor for this Occupation Play who will visit the playgrounds on a regular schedule. This schedule will be published next week in order to enable parents to send their children to the playground for this type of instruction.

Two supervisors of Folk Dancing will give instructions in Folk Dancing and in Social Dancing. A baseball schedule for girls and for Junior and Senior boys will go into operation next week. The preliminary schedule will be arranged for four districts. After the districts have decided their Championship, the districts will play for the city championship.

Similar schedules are being arranged in Iron Quilts, Flatball, Captain Ball, Schlag Ball, etc.

It is hoped that a special schedule for instruction in swimming and life saving will be arranged next week, if an expert woman instructor and one man instructor can be found. This will probably mean that there will be two mornings reserved for instruction (Continued on Page 6.)

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

Pledge to the Public on Used Car Sales

1 All used cars offered to the public shall be honestly represented.

If a car is suitable only for a mechanic who can rebuild it, or for some one who expects only a few months' rough usage on a camping trip, it must be sold on that basis. Each car must be sold for just what it is.

2 All Studebaker automobiles which are sold as CERTIFIED CARS have been properly reconditioned, and carry a 30-day guarantee for replacement of defective parts and free service on adjustments.

This is possible because tremendous reserve mileage has been built into every Studebaker, which it is impossible to exhaust in years.

3 Every used car is conspicuously marked with its price in plain figures, and that price, just as the price of our new cars, is rigidly maintained.

The public can deal in confidence and safety only with the dealer whose policy is "one price only—the same price to all." For, to sell cars on this basis, every one of them must be honestly priced to begin with.

4 Every purchaser of a used car may drive it for five days, and then, if not satisfied for any reason, turn it back and apply the money paid as a credit on the purchase of any other car in stock—new or used.

It is assumed, of course, that the car has not been smashed up by collision or other accident in the meantime.

Not only to the public, but also to The Studebaker Corporation of America, whose cars we sell, we pledge adherence to the above policy in selling used cars.

Newton Garage & Automobile Co.

The Studebaker Corporation of America takes pride and pleasure in announcing that the above Pledge is being carried out by

Newton Garage & Automobile Co.

24 Brook St., Newton N. N. 1300

THE Pledge speaks for itself. It is a formal declaration of the fair and square attitude of Studebaker dealers toward the public. It is an assurance of honest dealing in a line of merchandising which in some times and places has fallen into ill repute. It is an assertion of confidence in the reserve mileage built into the sturdy "one-profit" Studebaker automobiles.

POLICE COURT

Charged with attempted felonious assault on a woman in whose home he was whitewashing a ceiling, John E. Blanchard of 295 Lake street, Waltham, was in Court last Friday. Judge Weston found probable cause and held Blanchard in $3000, for the Grand Jury.

Mrs. W. G. Perry of Edinboro street, Newtonville, was the complainant. According to the testimony, Blanchard went to work at the Perry home, and just before noon, Mrs. Perry testified that he attempted to assault her, when her husband returned from work. Blanchard, she said, crawled out of the hall on his knees into the room where he had been working.

Mr. Perry testified that he was about to administer a beating to Blanchard but the man begged him to have him arrested instead. The police were called and patrolman Frank Feeley took Blanchard into custody. Blanchard's wife, sister-in-law, former employers and a parish priest testified as to his character. Blanchard denied all of Mrs. Perry's allegations.

Charles Brody of Church street, Wellesley Hills, who was arrested last week, in Newton Upper Falls, by patrolman Dan Crowley on a charge of being drunk and operating an automobile while he was under the influence of liquor, was fined $15, in Court Tuesday morning, on the drunk charge and sentenced to two months in the House of Correction for operating. This was his second offense on these charges within six years, and the sentence in such cases is mandatory. This is the second case of this nature to come before the Newton Court since the passing of the "Drunken Driver" law.

THE HAZARD

love the man who dares to face defeat. And risks a conflict with heroic heart; I love the man who bravely does his part. Here Right and Wrong in bloody battle meet. When bugles blown by cowards sound retreat, I love the man who grasps his sword again. And sets himself to lead his fellow-men. Far forward through the battle's din and heat.

or he who joins the issue on life's field. Must fully know the hazard of the fray. And dare to venture ere he hope to win; Just choose the risk and then refuse to yield. Until the sunset lights shall close the day. And God's great city let the victor in.

More Milk—Better Health

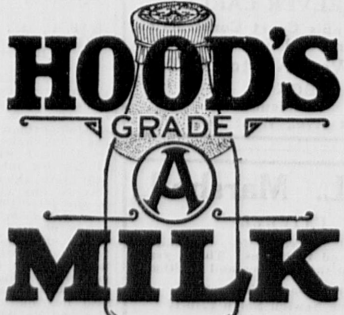

The more we know about milk the surer we are that this is true. No other food contains the life-giving combination we find in milk, and no other food is so easy to digest and assimilate. But milk quality is important. Hood's Grade "A" settles that. Try it for a month. Its richness and fine flavor will appeal to you and the children as well.

CUT OUT "STUNTS"

If you wish to come through the Fourth of July safely, with every finger in place, with your flesh and bones whole, with bright eyes, and flushed with pride at your sane conception of patriotism, then don't indulge in any freak stunts or take risks that are "tabooed" by accident insurance companies, advises the A. L. A.

Some people pick out the Fourth of July on which to show all their pent up carelessness, all their exuberance of selfishness, regardless of where they may be or go and utterly reckless as to what they do. The day after is forgotten in the wild doings of the night before.

You can have just as good time and be respected 1000 per cent more by driving your car at moderate speed, by refraining from making hideous noise, by letting "hoohoo" alone, by being courteous and considerate, and being able to afterward write in your diary, if you keep one, "I didn't realize how shamefully I have acted in the past."

There are a thousand ways to get into trouble, but only one to keep out and it is easier to hold fast to that one than it is to watch the thousand.

Drive with both hands on the wheel. Watch traffic ahead of you. Be sure when you approach a corner in city or country that your speed is reduced, that your brakes are in order and that you have your car under control. Remember if you are going at 20 miles an hour you are covering approximately 30 feet in one second, and that one second is one tick of the clock. There is not much time to think or act. Do not race with another car. In doing so you will forget everything else, and in fast driving the 30 feet becomes 60 or 80 per second.

Danger lurks at curves in the road, take them slowly as far on your side as it is safe. Give the speed demon who may meet you there plenty of space in which to destroy himself, if he so desires, but not you.

Approach steam railroad crossings with reverence. They are the shrine of fools. Stop before you cross unless you are absolutely sure that it is safe to go on. Do not make this your last spot on earth by carelessness as so many have done. There is less reason for an accident at a railroad crossing than in any other place on the road.

Observe these few instructions faithfully and as far as your driving is concerned the Fourth of July will take on a new meaning for you.

EDITORIAL

The Rev. Dr. George S. Butters, whose death took place this week, was one of the most beloved residents of the city. Having held pastorates in Newton, Newtonville, and Auburndale for many years he had a remarkable wide acquaintance, and all who knew his tact and his wide sympathies knew him to be a man of great worth. His death is a loss to the community, not only because of his services as a pastor, but because of his services as a citizen. His death is a loss to the community, not only because of his services as a pastor, but because of his services as a citizen.

From present indications Newton will be almost deserted the coming two months, with so many persons either traveling by motor car, going to Europe or occupying a cottage at the shore or in the country. Time was, not so very long ago, when two weeks was the usual length, now it is two months and even longer in many instances. And with all this migration, Newton isn't such a bad place to spend a summer at that.

Once more we have an opportunity to show the younger generation that it is possible to have a perfectly good time on July 4th without maiming or killing anyone. Let us all see to it that this year we have a "safe and sane" celebration of our natal day.

While it is gratifying to note that our city is growing year by year, it is particularly interesting to learn that the largest gain was made in such an attractive district as Waban. Thus proving a growth in quality as well as in quantity.

It makes one somewhat thoughtful when we realize that the great men who signed the Declaration of Independence and led the colonies in the Revolution of one hundred and fifty years ago, were the radicals of their day and generation.

THE FOURTH

There will be no civic celebrations in the city in recognition of the Fourth of July, nor will any of the village improvement associations carry out programs. The usual display of fireworks at the Brae-Burn Country Club for members will take place on the night of the Fourth. This evening and Saturday afternoon and evening, at Hawthorn, Playgrounds, Nonantum, Court Pligh of the Italian Foresters of America, will hold its annual field day and carnival. On the evening of the Fourth the Foresters will have a large display of fireworks.

for girls and women at Crystal Lake, in Auburndale, and Allison Bathing Beach, Nonantum.

Parents are urged to see to it that their children go directly from their homes to the playgrounds, that they do not loiter or play on the streets. There is hardly a street now safe in Newton for street play, and since playground attendance is not compulsory and since it's greatest influence is derived from spontaneous attendance, it is necessary that children who go to the playgrounds are shown the most direct and safest route to the playground, and that the parents caution them not to loiter or to play on the streets.

There is not as much traffic regulation and supervision during the summer months as we have when the schools are in session, but the accidents due to street play are mounting during these months and we urge that all the parents see to it that their children will not play on the streets, that they will play in the places provided for them and where they are properly supervised.

This Generation May See Return to Knee Breeches

Men, it's just a little more than a century ago since long trousers began to come into fashion. Beau Brummel, the celebrated English society leader, had introduced them a few years before. His daring example had been copied by the "dandies" of the day. But most men held back, especially the conservative "substantial" ones.

They considered long trousers a childish form of masquerade and were afraid they would look ridiculous if they abandoned knee-breeches.

Today it's the other way around.

After a century, the pendulum swings and knee breeches are said to be coming back. They are worn by golfers, engineers and other men of the outdoors, and on camping trips and hikes.

Judging by ease and comfort, a great many men—if truth were known—would like to wear "knee pants" all the time.

Why not? Alas, in their community association men have acquired a timidity and sense of shame in anything not conforming to the crowd. Long trousers are "the go"; and it's a brazen male who dares fly in the teeth of convention.—Washington Post.

Madagascar Once Home of Enormous Reptiles.

It is a singular fact that, barring the wild cattle and the crocodiles, the great African island (Madagascar) is wholly destitute of big game. Yet it teems with animal life in its lesser forms, including such curious animals as the aye-aye, one of the most remarkable creatures known; 39 varieties of lemurs; a ferocious member of the civet family, which looks like an enormous weasel; and a wild dog which appears to be a cross between a coyote, a jackal and a dingo.

But Madagascar has not always lacked large animals, as its fossil remains attest, for in ages past it was the habitat of enormous terrestrial lizards 50 feet in length, and of the great wingless bird, the aepyornis, twice the size of an ostrich.

The eggs of the aepyornis, some of which are 40 inches in circumference, are still frequently found in the neighborhood of Fort Dauphin, at the southern end of the island, where the natives use them for carrying water.—E. Alexander Powell in the Century Magazine.

Hardy Redwood

Nature has endowed the giant redwoods with a natural preservation which protects the timber against decay and rot indefinitely for centuries, in fact after the trees have fallen or been cut down. Trees known to have been blown over in the woods long before the discovery of America, and which have lain exposed to the elements ever since, have been found to be in splendid condition and capable of use as commercial timber.

One particular instance is recorded where a fallen tree was found underneath another big redwood that had grown astraddle the uprooted giant, but when the standing tree was cut its rings showed it to be nearly 1,000 years old.

This meant that the uprooted tree had been down for nearly 1,000 years. The rings of the fallen tree showed it to be about 600 years old when it fell, yet the log was sound and healthy.—Kreolite News.

Trouble Both Ways

An Australian barrister tells of a black fellow charged in a country town with stealing. His solicitor decided to put him in the box to give evidence on his own behalf. The magistrate, being doubtful if he understood the nature of an oath, undertook to examine him on the point.

"Jacky," he said, "you know what will happen to you if you tell a lie?"

"My oath, boss," replied Jacky, "me go down below—burn long time."

"Quite right," replied the magistrate. "And now you know what will happen if you tell the truth?"

"Yes, boss. We lose 'em case."—Sydney Herald.

Tiger Cuning

About to travel to India, a man was told by his friends to be sure not to miss the tiger shooting.

"It's no trick at all," they said. "You hide in a thicket at night; when the beast arrives, aim between its two eyes, shining in the dark. It will fall as if struck by lightning."

On his return they asked how many tigers he had killed.

"None at all," he replied sadly. "They've become altogether too clever. They now travel in pairs, and each one closes an eye. So of course—"

—Paris Le Rile.

Professionalism

The seance was proving a great success. The new member of the circle, an Oldham pigeon fancier, had been brought into touch with the late departed father-in-law, who had just announced he was an angel.

"Wi' wings an' all?" asked the son-in-law.

The reply was in the affirmative. "What dost measure fra' tip to tip?" asked the pigeon fancier.—Vancouver Province.

Hard on the Ball

She—Wasn't mother pumping you last night?

He—Yes, and I think she'd better, too. That's what I need.

She—What do you mean?

He—Your dad has been using me for a football.

Action Demanded by Short-Story Readers

"Your work is excellent but unsalable."

In these terse but kindly meant words a literary agent dismissed, a few days ago, a young author who had submitted to him some short stories. The young author complained later that it was useless to attempt to write artistic stories for the British public, writes a critic in the London Mail.

"I am told that my work is good," he mourned. "But in England there is no demand for work that is above the average. It is necessary to sacrifice ideals in art if you expect to make a living. Every short-story writer has to submit to popular taste if he wishes to sell his stories."

The assumption, of course, was that popular taste is always bad taste. But is it?

There is a certain restricted class of reader who likes to know what people think rather than what they do. Such a reader can find enormous pleasure in books or short stories in which all adventures are adventures of the mind. But by far the greater number of readers of fiction prefer action. They have no patience with the school of writers who believe that to reveal the innermost thoughts of a man or woman who does nothing is the supreme test of artistry.

To expel from the ranks of good books all novels which are novels of action would be to cut out some of the greatest stories written. No longer should we be able to rejoice in the adventures of the Three Musketeers or follow the doings of a David Copperfield.

Popular taste asks for romance, for stories of courage and movement, of human impulses and deep-seated emotions common to us all. Is popular taste wrong?

Scientists Now Know Composition of Atom

Fifty years ago, remarks Sir Oliver Lodge, we did not know the atom had a structure; but it has now been delivered up its secret, and is found to consist of very minute and concentrated electric charges revolving round a nucleus, as the planets revolve round the sun. The discovery is quite recent that the same system of law and order that reigns through the heavens holds equally in the interior of the atom, so that there is an atomic astronomy growing up before our eyes, leading us to wonder if there is any limit to smallness any more than there is any limit to bigness, says the London Mail.

Among all these immensities, man may appear insignificant and hampered by his animal ancestry. He has much to contend against and overcome. Sometimes he seems evil and ugly, but he is immature. He is in the process of making.

Time to Go

Owen owed Rogers $20. Owen had successfully avoided meeting Rogers until now he had run full tilt into him. It was quite unavoidable, otherwise the meeting would never have taken place. Trust Owen for that!

They chatted for some minutes on a variety of subjects, and at last Owen, wishing to get away before the subject of the debt was raised, said:

"What's the time, old man?"

Rogers pulled out his watch and, regarding it with a frown, replied:

"Well, it's about time that you repaid that money."

"Oh," exclaimed Owen in alarm, "I had no idea that it was as late as that. I must be off. Good-by, old man!"

Poet's Odd Experience

There is an instance, recorded some time ago, of the late poet James Whitcomb Riley's experience, when some strange impulse drew him out of bed and prompted him to write his poem "Bereaved," the simple story of the death of a little child. At the time, Riley had no knowledge that the child of any one in whom he was interested was even seriously ill. He could not imagine why this insistent thought should have come to him. But in his mail a few days later came a letter from his old friend Bill Nye, announcing the death of one of his children on the very night that the strange call to write had come to the poet.

Official Terms Vary

Mohammedan Legend

The al borak was a marvelous animal of surpassing swiftness on which Mohammed is said to have made a nocturnal journey from the temple at Mecca to Jerusalem and thence to the seventh heaven, under the guidance of the angel Gabriel. Its eyes were like stars, and its body was resplendent with precious stones. It had the wings of an eagle, and a human face with the cheeks of a horse. According to Mohammedan faith the al borak is one of the few animals admitted to heaven.—Kansas City Star.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER

Written by
Leverett D. G. Bentley

A reader of this column has thoughtfully provided us with the official statement upon which was based our recent comment on the high standing attained by Newton as a result of the health survey of school children in Massachusetts cities. Had we read this we would have unhesitatingly bestowed due credit upon Miss Mabel C. Bragg, Assistant Superintendent of Schools, and the teachers of Newton. They, as our correspondent points out, "have worked earnestly for the last five years to help the children establish good health habits and to fix them so firmly that they have become part of their daily life." It appears that the Child Health Organization of America sent Miss Anne Whitney to investigate and report concerning the health work in the city of Newton. Her report was published by the Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior. The foreword of the report is of particular interest to Newton people. It reads as follows:

"Many schools throughout the country are earnestly working to develop a well-rounded health education for their pupils. All sections of such a program in a school do not grow at the same rate. It is the old parable of the sower who went forth to sow his seed, and some fell on good ground and grew and brought forth fruit in hundredfold.

"In Newton the seed of vitalized health teaching fell upon the fertile soil of a school system where the standard of general teaching was perhaps exceptionally high. It has grown in the sunshine of administrative encouragement and approval, tended by the close co-operation of principals and teachers until its roots are firmly established in the school life.

"There is promise of fruit in hundredfold in the improved health habits of the individual children. The work in Newton is unique because of the many varied methods developed by the teachers to stimulate the interest of the pupils in proper health habits.

"It is not to be expected that the Governor of the Commonwealth can scrutinize the list of applicants for these appointments. In the first place there are too many of them for his personal study and in the second place it is only fair to assume that their dossiers are standing by their written statements. But, like all other human institutions, the system has its weaknesses and in years past notaries public and justices of the peace have been appointed who were not honest and who used the authority granted them for improper purposes. We remember hearing a former Governor declare, 'There are some men who ought to be in State Prison acting as justices and notaries.' He did not mean, of course, that there is any demand for these functionaries at State Prison, but did, in an ungrammatical way, point out that some officials indulge in practices that made them liable to a term in the penitentiary. We have never started to figure out what percentage are 'slippery' but we are willing to believe the number to be comparatively small. And yet so many complaints have been made that the Governor and his Council have decided to act. The appointing process has come to be a 'mill.' We are glad that the Governor has seen fit to put his foot down. The whole thing will now be taken seriously, or at least much more seriously than it has been. There have been too many men holding these commissions who really had no use for them or if they did it was of little help to the community. We believe that there has been insufficient dignity attached to these offices in the past and that the Governor and Council, in insisting that hereafter an applicant must have a certificate from the presiding justice of the district that 'public convenience requires the creation of the office' is going to increase respect for the law and nobody will deny that such is highly important these days.

We have had a few things to say in weeks gone by about the indifference shown by automobilists to pedestrians and their comfort. This particular paragraph is dedicated to the auto-owner who parks his car on the sidewalk of those on foot. A striking instance was called to our attention recently. The city's parking space at Newton Corner between Centre and Richardson street on the south side of Washington street is for the benefit of all citizens. Naturally those who drive cars assume that they are the only ones able to enjoy it. Many seem to have an opinion that it is not to be used by the pedestrians. Perhaps that is true, but they should not forget there is a sidewalk between the street and the railroad fence. And sidewalks, although they seem in many cases to be taken over by bicycle-riders, were never intended for the use of automobilists. Some car-owners act as if the contrary were true but it is not, however. When a man wheeling a baby carriage along the sidewalk has to stop and lift the carriage over several obstacles it seems to be a bit thick, as the English would put it. The reason for this was that cars were backed right against the curbstone; so close, indeed, that bumpers and spare tires protruded or projected well on to the sidewalk. We do not think this is fair and would respectfully register our protest for whatever it may or may not be worth. Until the city can see its way clear to erect overhead sidewalks to keep pedestrians off the earth altogether automobilists should be made to respect the rules of the sidewalk and the rules of fair play.

We always read the many warnings put out at this period by State and municipal officials regarding the general American tendency to over-celebrate the Fourth of July. Of course all are not needed, more's the pity, and yet if they were a great many people would not feel they could properly venture outdoors for the holiday. At the same time we believe these officials justified in pointing out the importance of exercising extreme care and moderation. The State police tell us not to monkey with explosives, to be cautious in handling fire for illumination and also fire-water for the same purpose; to be watchful of our step if we walk and drive with unceasing vigilance if we ride in a motor. There have come to be so many restrictions that the timid have an idea that it is a day of 'don't do this and don't do that.' It should not be and it should not be so regarded. The reckless have upset the whole business. They have gone on their way merrily with no consideration for the comfort and happiness of others. It surely is 'Independence Day' but not the hoggish kind of independence shown by some people. The great theory that making a noise constitutes a remarkable display of patriotism has its believers. They are not as numerous as in the past and yet what few there are who so believe can do a very successful job in disturbing the rest and peace of a neighborhood. We are not opposed to the racket that youngsters so much enjoy. Our nerves will stand that as early as the youngsters care to begin it and until as late as they wish to stay up. We do object to dangerous practices that threaten the bodily safety of our fellow beings. If State and municipal officials by their alertness and their printed warnings can accomplish something we are indeed grateful. Just as the young folks thought they had settled down to 'a nice long vacation' the School Committee announces the dates for the reopening of schools next September. The health teaching is based on sound pedagogy and psychology and the teachers are alert to recognize all the health opportunities which the daily life offers.

"Three years ago this Spring (the report was published in 1923) the school department, through the literature of the Child Health Organization, became interested in the need of more educational health work in the schools. The teachers and principals, appreciating the educational need for such health work, responded heartily and bent their energies to the development of this simple plan for health instruction.

"That the work has made such steady progress during the past two years is due to the skill and unflagging methods for interesting the children; to the co-operative attitude of the principals, parents and school medical service; to the support of the superintendent and to the inspirational leadership of the assistant superintendent, who shows a personal interest in the work done in every school by each individual child and teacher."

We believe that Newton people will read the above not only with satisfaction but with pride and again we desire to acknowledge our indebtedness to the reader from whom we received it.

It is very evident that Massachusetts is not to witness in 1925 the annual increase in justices of the peace and notaries public. This year's crop and the crop of succeeding years will be considerably lower than the annual output of the past. The Governor and Council, who have the appointing power, have apparently decided that Newton is unique because of the many varied methods developed by the teachers to stimulate the interest of the pupils in proper health habits.

We have nothing against justices of the peace and notaries—in fact those in Newton are, in our opinion, above criticism—but such is not true in all parts of the Commonwealth. Until the past week it was a simple process for almost anybody to become a notary public or justice of the peace. They made out an application, had it indorsed by a civic officer and a member of the bar and some other person, and it went through without any trouble. It is not to be expected that the Governor of the Commonwealth can scrutinize the list of applicants for these appointments. In the first place there are too many of them for his personal study and in the second place it is only fair to assume that their dossiers are standing by their written statements. But, like all other human institutions, the system has its weaknesses and in years past notaries public and justices of the peace have been appointed who were not honest and who used the authority granted them for improper purposes. We remember hearing a former Governor declare, 'There are some men who ought to be in State Prison acting as justices and notaries.' He did not mean, of course, that there is any demand for these functionaries at State Prison, but did, in an ungrammatical way, point out that some officials indulge in practices that made them liable to a term in the penitentiary. We have never started to figure out what percentage are 'slippery' but we are willing to believe the number to be comparatively small. And yet so many complaints have been made that the Governor and his Council have decided to act. The appointing process has come to be a 'mill.' We are glad that the Governor has seen fit to put his foot down. The whole thing will now be taken seriously, or at least much more seriously than it has been. There have been too many men holding these commissions who really had no use for them or if they did it was of little help to the community. We believe that there has been insufficient dignity attached to these offices in the past and that the Governor and Council, in insisting that hereafter an applicant must have a certificate from the presiding justice of the district that 'public convenience requires the creation of the office' is going to increase respect for the law and nobody will deny that such is highly important these days.

We have had a few things to say in weeks gone by about the indifference shown by automobilists to pedestrians and their comfort. This particular paragraph is dedicated to the auto-owner who parks his car on the sidewalk of those on foot. A striking instance was called to our attention recently. The city's parking space at Newton Corner between Centre and Richardson street on the south side of Washington street is for the benefit of all citizens. Naturally those who drive cars assume that they are the only ones able to enjoy it. Many seem to have an opinion that it is not to be used by the pedestrians. Perhaps that is true, but they should not forget there is a sidewalk between the street and the railroad fence. And sidewalks, although they seem in many cases to be taken over by bicycle-riders, were never intended for the use of automobilists. Some car-owners act as if the contrary were true but it is not, however. When a man wheeling a baby carriage along the sidewalk has to stop and lift the carriage over several obstacles it seems to be a bit thick, as the English would put it. The reason for this was that cars were backed right against the curbstone; so close, indeed, that bumpers and spare tires protruded or projected well on to the sidewalk. We do not think this is fair and would respectfully register our protest for whatever it may or may not be worth. Until the city can see its way clear to erect overhead sidewalks to keep pedestrians off the earth altogether automobilists should be made to respect the rules of the sidewalk and the rules of fair play.

We always read the many warnings put out at this period by State and municipal officials regarding the general American tendency to over-celebrate the Fourth of July. Of course all are not needed, more's the pity, and yet if they were a great many people would not feel they could properly venture outdoors for the holiday. At the same time we believe these officials justified in pointing out the importance of exercising extreme care and moderation. The State police tell us not to monkey with explosives, to be cautious in handling fire for illumination and also fire-water for the same purpose; to be watchful of our step if we walk and drive with unceasing vigilance if we ride in a motor. There have come to be so many restrictions that the timid have an idea that it is a day of 'don't do this and don't do that.' It should not be and it should not be so regarded. The reckless have upset the whole business. They have gone on their way merrily with no consideration for the comfort and happiness of others. It surely is 'Independence Day' but not the hoggish kind of independence shown by some people. The great theory that making a noise constitutes a remarkable display of patriotism has its believers. They are not as numerous as in the past and yet what few there are who so believe can do a very successful job in disturbing the rest and peace of a neighborhood. We are not opposed to the racket that youngsters so much enjoy. Our nerves will stand that as early as the youngsters care to begin it and until as late as they wish to stay up. We do object to dangerous practices that threaten the bodily safety of our fellow beings. If State and municipal officials by their alertness and their printed warnings can accomplish something we are indeed grateful. It puzzles us, however, when we think how often the American people have to be reminded that they mustn't go too far in their sports or diversions. Why should some folks feel it necessary to indulge themselves up to the limit and beyond in the name of patriotism. Maybe before July 4, 1926, someone will enlighten us.

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE

Probably the finest single result accruing to the benefit of the United States as a result of the World War was the revised National Defense act. The following story may be informative and interesting to the citizens of Newton.

The country is divided for the purpose of administration into 9 Areas, each having about the same present population, called Corps areas. The New England States from one of these and is called the First Corps area. To each of these Corps areas 3 Field Armies are allocated by the War Department. Each army is composed of troops from 3 different sources, The Regular Army, the National Guard, and the Organized Reserves.

The Regular Army is maintained in time of peace, armed, equipped and trained ready for service at any time, its big mission in peace time is to furnish instruction to the other components.

The National guard is maintained armed, equipped and partially trained, ready for duty as front line troops after a very short period of intensive training. The Organized reserves are just what their name implies, organized to the extent of having each unit allocated to a community, its commissioned personnel assigned to it, and in addition a few of the enlisted men such as first sergeants, supply sergeants, and mess sergeants.

Congress appropriates a small sum of money which enables the President to call for duty, for a period not to exceed 15 days without the consent of the reserve officer concerned, a small number of the reserve officers each year. In the instruction work the effort is to emphasize the "elements of command" and have the officers themselves carry on the work under the direction and tutelage of the regular officers assigned for the purpose.

The National Guard carry on all the time, they are a State force and the Governor of the state is the Commander in Chief, until such time as the United States needs them. In certain cases they can be called for duty by the President, but for the general service of the United States for duty anywhere in time of war the authority of Congress is necessary. In order that their training and equipment may be uniform throughout the country the Federal government arms, equips and supervises the training, and pays the troops.

So we find residing in Newton at the present time, about 15 officers of the Regular army while on the various duties of the army in this community.

A national guard company drilling every week at the armory, and 15 day encampment at Camp Devens. This is Co. C 101st Inf.

About 60 Reserve officers belonging to various units of the reserves allocated to this Corps area.

A total of 824 men to come from this city in the first part of any war in which the services of the organized reserves might be required.

The defense test this year shows an advance over that of last year in that we now know just what companies belong to our community, and that we have the commissioned personnel for them.

JELLIES, PICKLES AND PRESERVES

Besides chapters in the many general books on cookery, which cover the making of jellies, pickles and preserves and the various methods of canning fruits and vegetables, there are many excellent books in the Newton Free Library which are devoted exclusively to this subject.

Some of the books covering various phases of the work, which will be of interest both to the woman who does her own work and to the home-planner who has charge of a more pretentious household, follow:

Food Conservation and the Art of Home Canning, by Mrs. Sherwood P. Snyder (contains instructions for both open kettle method and special apparatus canning).

Canning and Preserving, by Mrs. S. T. Rorer—RUP.86—a brief, comprehensive, reliable book; especially strong on fruits, jellies and pickling.

Canning, Preserving and Pickling, by Marion Harris Neil—RUP.81 (includes some less common recipes and the preparation of some unusual materials)—illustrated.

Home Canning Manual for Vegetables and Fruits, published by National Emergency Food Garden Commission, Washington, D. C. (1917)—RUP.21 (while this was essentially a war emergency rule book, the general instructions and diagrams of apparatus covering preservation of both fruit and vegetables for winter use are equally useful at this time).

Canning, Preserving and Pickling, by Janet M. Hill—RUP.85 (clear instructions in conveniently large type for both the open kettle and cold pack or steam cook methods).

A manual of Canning and Preserving, by Theodor M. Carrell—RUP.23 (brief comprehensive instructions for handling both fruit and vegetables, with time tables showing length of time for cooking under various conditions).

Successful Canning and Preserving, a practical handbook for Schools, Clubs, and Home Use, by Ola Powell—RUP.87 (a rather full and complete treatise, with detailed index—covers the commercial side of the subject to some extent).

The Canning of Fruits and Vegetables, by Justo P. Zavalla—RUP.219 (the commercial side of canning, based on methods in use in California).

Dehydrating Foods, Fruits, Vegetables, Fish and Meats, by A. Louise Andra—RUP.255.

Three interesting older books follow: Recipes for the Preserving of Fruit, Vegetables and Meat, by E. Wagner—RUP.12 (a translation from the German, published in 1908).

Food Preserves, Syrup and Preserves for Housekeepers and Fruit Growers, by Mrs. S. D. Power (published in 1885)—RUP.87.

Preserving and Pickling, by Gesine Lemcke—RUP.154 (published in 1899) has many excellent recipes.

THE NEWTON GRAPHIC

VOL. LIII.—NO. 44

NEWTON, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1925.

TERMS, $3.00 A YEAR

NEWTON PLAYGROUNDS

Complete Schedules of the Various Classes Conducted by the Playground Department

The Playground Department again urges parents to keep the children from playing on the sidewalks or on the streets. Some of the experienced directors are making regular visits in the neighborhood to have the children go to playgrounds rather than run risks in street play. Not much progress can be made unless the parents help.

An expert swimming teacher is regularly at the Auburndale Bathing Beach. She already has a number of young people ready to pass the swimming as well as the life-saving tests. From now on she will be at Crystal Lake Bathing Beach on Wednesday and Friday mornings from 9.30 to 11.30 A. M., and at least a part of the beach will be reserved for girls for this purpose.

The following is a schedule of Band Concerts given on the Playgrounds. During the first part of the program a Community Song Leader will lead in singing. West Newton Playground, July 16; Newton Upper Falls Playground, July 23; Newton Centre Playground, July 30; Eden avenue (W. N.) Playground, August 6; Newton Highlands Playground, August 13; Newton Upper Falls Playground, August 20; Stearns Playground, August 27.

There will be folk dancing, under direction of Mrs. Margaret P. Hills and Miss Grace C. Kerrihan. Monday morning, Burr and Horace Mann. Afternoon, Stearns, Hawthorn, Upper Falls, Auburndale. Evening, Eden avenue.

Tuesday morning, Boyd and Thompsonville. Afternoon, Cabot, Eden avenue, Newton Centre, Auburndale; evening, Cabot. Wednesday morning, Victory and Horace Mann; afternoon, Stearns, Hawthorn and Waban.

BACHRACH BUYS LARGE PLANT

Through the offices of John T. Burns & Sons, Inc., the Steam Motor Vehicle Company of America (formerly Stanley Motor Company) have sold to The Bachrach Studios, their entire holdings of real estate beautifully situated on the South Bank of the Charles River and bordering on Hunt, Maple and Water streets on the Newton and Watertown line. The property includes 12 separate buildings with about 112,000 square feet of floor space and covering over three acres of land. Bachrach, Inc. will use the property for their Executive Offices and for their Finishing Studio.

The Stanley Motor Car Company expects to move West, and practically the entire premises will be occupied by the Bachrach Studios for their work, which will give them plenty of room for future expansion.

The finishing of the photographs for the entire organization, comprising thirty-six studios, all of them East of the Mississippi River, is now being done in Newton, and when the new premises are ready for occupancy it will be the finest and largest plant for the producing of photographic portraits in the world.

It may be interesting to note that the original Stanley Photographic Dry Plates, invented and manufactured by the Stanley Brothers, F. O. and F. E. Stanley, were formerly made in one of these buildings.

The buildings and land are valued at over $200,000 and this is the largest sale in this type of property that has been consummated in Newton for many years.

COMPULSORY INSURANCE

In a recent interview Representative Clarence S. Luitwieler has the following to say regarding the new Compulsory automobile insurance law passed by the Legislature of this year:—

In the closing hours of the Legislature a bill became a law, which may go a long way toward solving the question of the irresponsible automobile owner, who is now such a menace on the road. This law is the first of its kind in this country, the so-called "Compulsory Insurance" law under the terms of which every owner of an automobile will be obliged to present to the Registrar of Motor Vehicles an insurance policy drawn in accordance with this law before a registration will, or can be issued. The law does not cover property damage, but only provides for redress in case of personal injury or death. Usually it is the irresponsible owner who is to blame for the average accident with the injured party helpless to get any redress.

The opposition to this bill from the insurance people was largely due to the fact that the Insurance Commissioner under the bill was the one who would determine the form, rate and classification of the certificate of insurance, which must accompany the application for registration and they feared the rate would be too low as compared with present rates and furthermore that it would entail a great deal of extra work to have all of the policies issued at the same time. This is hardly a valid excuse, as more than half of the registrations are issued over a period of four to six months. This opposition is largely from a selfish standpoint, as is the opposition from the automobile dealers, who fear it will tend to curtail their sales.

In both cases the ultimate benefit to the entire community does not weigh against the selfish ends of these interests.

This legislation has been carefully drawn, so that the insurance company, the automobile owner and the public are all protected, but undoubtedly like all legislation it will develop defects, but the proponents felt that the only way to get results was to correct defects as they develop, rather than to say "it will tend to curtail their sales."

No one knows what the cost will be until the Insurance Commissioner fixes the rate, and besides the law does not become operative until 1927 and if the referendum is invoked not until 1928.

Then again, the opponents talk about the millions it will cost the dear people, just as they argued on the gasoline tax in millions, rather than the cost to the individual.

THE 1925 BUDGET

The budget of city expenses passed last spring should be thoroughly understood by every tax payer, calling as it does for the sum of $3,290,010.80. While this amount is on its face something about $70,000 less than that of last year it should be borne in mind that the 1924 figures included something like $100,000 for work and plans for the High School addition, that there was $10,000 last year for the purchase of the Lower Falls playground and $3000 less expense this year for elections.

The department estimates for 1925 called for $3,555,311 without the water department, the mayor cut this to $3,440,283 while the Finance Committee reduced it still further to $3,290,010 or about $150,000 less than the mayor's figures. Treasury is cut some $7000, the Buildings Department $58,000, Police $9,000, Fire $10,000, Health Dept. $8,000, Library, $5,000, School $8,000, Playground $7000, and Street Dept., $31,000.

There was a substantial increase in salaries of city officers, the department heads asking for liberal increases, with the mayor approving almost all they asked. The Finance Committee, however, failed to see it in the same light and made cuts in almost every instance. In two departments the Finance Committee actually increased the figures of the department heads, giving the chairman of the assessors an increase of $250 to $3,750, the two other assessors, $100 each to $2,400, and the Water Commissioner, $250 additional to $3,650.

The committee approved the mayor's figures of $4,500 for the Commissioner, and $4,500 for the Street Commissioner.

It cut the Treasurer's increase from $500 to $300, making a salary of $4,800, the City Solicitor's increase of $1,000 to $800 making it $4,800, the City Clerk's by $100 making it $3,900, the City Messenger's $2,900 to $80, making it $1,860, the Building Commissioner's $1,000 to $500 making a total of $4,000, the Sealer by $100, making his $2,200, the chairman of the Board of Health's increase of $1,700, which the Mayor cut to $1,000 was further cut to $100, making a total of $2,000, the Superintendent of Playgrounds increase of $800 was cut to $500, a total of $2,700. No change was made in the salary of the Overseer of the Poor, $2,350, notwithstanding there is a new and only acting official in that department.

The detailed figures by departments are as follows:

General Department	$3,390.00
Executive Department	9,125.00
Accounting Department	70,318.15
Treasury Department	424,695.67

MR. MILLS' DEAD

The death of Mr. Charles Mills of Newton Upper Falls at the Brooks Hospital in Brookline on July 4th, removes a man long identified with business and civic affairs of this city.

Mr. Mills was born at Rochdale, Lancashire, England, in 1852; the son of Frederick and Mary Mills. His boyhood was spent in the town of Heywood where his father was engaged in cotton machinery manufacture and here he began his life work which was to continue for over fifty years.

The improvement and development of textile machinery, especially of the Revolving Flat Card, was to him a task of unflinching interest and along these lines he was widely recognized as an expert.

From England he was sent by Howard and Bullough to superintend their work in India and during his three years there his father was engaged in cotton machinery manufacture and here he began his life work which was to continue for over fifty years.

In 1893 Mr. Mills became superintendent of the Pettie Machine Works which during his time was destined to grow from a small shop to a plant sending machinery to all parts of the world and known today as the Saco Lowell Shops. In recent years Mr. Mills' service broadened to that of Consulting Engineer.

His even disposition, dignified bearing and unselfish interest in others won the respect and love of his workmen. Many a young man found in him a patient listener and a wise advisor. Race or creed mattered not to him. In each one he saw the man; encouraged his hopes and lessened his fears.

A man of quiet tastes, his life was devoted to his work, his books, his family and his friends. Among his happiest days were those spent at his Fitzwilliam home where he found congenial surroundings and loyal friends.

He took a live interest in the affairs of his adopted country. During the World War he threw open his doors and his house became the center of Red Cross activities. He was a member of the Newton Upper Falls Improvement Society and of the Dalhousie Lodge of Masons.

Although in failing health, he attended business up to a short time before his death. The funeral held in the Methodist Episcopal Church, Newton Upper Falls on Tuesday afternoon, was attended by a large number of friends and business associates. Rev. George L. Parker, pastor of the Unitarian Church of Newton Centre, conducted the service, assisted by Dr. William Shaw. Mr. Ralph Williamson of Watertown, at the organ, played Mr. Mills' favorite hymns. The esteem in which Mr. Mills was held was signified by the mass of flowers banded about the altar. Cremation was at Mt. Auburn and interment at Fitzwilliam, N. H.

Mr. Mills is survived by his widow and three children. Fred H. Mills of Pittsburgh, Pa., Mrs. Donald Plinchbaugh, Miss Eleanor Mills both of Newton Upper Falls and four grandchildren. Also a brother and three sisters in England.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Oration Which Won First Prize in the Recent Intercollegiate Contest

In the recent Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest on the Constitution, the following address by E. Wight Bakke of the Northwestern University of Evanston, Ill., was awarded first prize.

In the nation's capital at Washington, is an old, faded parchment, honored by every American. It bears the signatures of some of America's most illustrious men. This document men have called the Constitution of the United States. And yet it is but a symbol of the real Constitution. This latter document is written not on parchment but on the heart of every American. It bears not thirty-nine signatures; for each of us it is signed by but one name—our own.

In a very real sense this Constitution is your Constitution and mine. It grew out of the experience of our ancestors. For 150 years the American colonists, our forefathers, had been weighing and analyzing, adopting and rejecting, various suggestions which came from the government of the mother country. Slowly their conceptions grew, and when the decisive moment came, they were ready. After the War of the Revolution had been fought, they at last gained the opportunity to organize the experience of the 150 years of colonial life. They formulated the theory and principles of free government in that time honored document, our Constitution. This document is the heritage handed down to us by our forefathers. It is ours.

But a document was not enough. Their work was not finished. The Constitution was not yet written on the hearts of the people. Many years of testing, even a great Civil War, have been necessary to point out to Americans that theoretical government is not practical government, that a Constitution written on parchment will fade and pass away; only that Constitution engraved on the nation's heart can live, and grow—and serve.

I wonder if you and I, students of 300 years of American history, have learned that the Constitution is not a master who rules from without, but a servant whose strength is within ourselves. I wonder if we have learned that our Constitution cannot exist as a work of a group of colonial statesmen, but can live only so long as we Americans keep its principles alive in our hearts.

If our Constitution is to live as the embodiment of the spirit of good government, it must grow and develop; it must unify this people, protect their liberties, and must have adequate authority to accomplish these ends. But it cannot fulfill these requirements unless we are willing to do our part as citizens. If the Constitution succeeds in doing this, it is because you and I have made it possible. If it fails, it is because you and I have not accepted our responsibility. Our ancestors have done their part; the future of the Constitution depends on us.

The growth and development of our Constitution depends on our intelligent thought and activity. The Constitution will meet the growing needs of the nation only when we as citizens are sensitive to those needs, and bring about those necessary adjustments by our activity. Through our amending power or through customs which we create, we are constantly enriching its terms, giving new meanings to old phrases. When Americans have realized their responsibility, they have written into the Constitution the inalienable rights of every citizen, they have given to women an equal chance to express themselves through the ballot, they have made our nation a saloonless nation, they have made slaves—men. But if we allow ourselves to be swept from our opinion, if we allow ourselves to be moved by passion rather than by reason, by careless unconcern rather than by active interest, the rational development of our Constitution must stop.

Now, just as the Constitution can grow only through our intelligent thought and activity, so it can unify this great country only through our unselfishness. Our Union is just as strong as our willingness to consider the interests of all rather than the interests of the few. The Civil War furnishes a tragic example of the disaster which follows the refusal of any part of a people, unselfishly, to surrender their sectional desires in the interest of a strengthened union. If we allow selfish individual or sectional motive to determine our attitudes, this union must prove but a rope of sand.

Even the power of the Constitution to guard our liberties depends on our willingness to recognize the rights of the other man. Truly it can be said of a democracy that no man lives unto himself. It may be that my individual right to carry on a profit-making business in alcoholic beverages interferes with the right of every citizen to live in an orderly community. It may interfere with the right of every child to have adequate education or to be reared in a well-known home. If knowing this, I insist on my individual right to line my pockets with silver gained at the price of lost opportunities for men, women and children, I make the Constitution the keeper of my own rights and not the guardian of the rights of all. Individual liberty based on such a motive means liberty for the few who are strong—not for all the people. The Constitution can safeguard our liberties, only when we are willing to recognize the rights of every citizen. If we recognize no rights but our own, we rob ourselves and others of that safeguard to liberty which should be the heritage of every American.

Furthermore, any authority which the Constitution may have rests in our faith. Kings could enforce their will through their armies, but our Constitution has no greater authority than the confidence placed in it by the American people. An agreement between friends is worth no more than the faith each has in the other. The Constitution might be called an agreement which every American has made with every other American. If our

NEWTON HOSPITAL

Week ending July 4.—Patients in hospital 93, patients paying as much as cost of care or more 48, patients paying less than cost of care 20, free patients, including babies, 25, babies born 9, patients treated by out patient department 63, patients treated at eye clinic 5, accident cases 9, social service calls at hospital 10.

In June there were 340 patients admitted to the hospital and 341 discharged. The daily average number of patients was 113.57 the largest number for any one day being 126 and the smallest number 100. There were 32 babies born. The out patient department treated 423 cases and the eye clinic 26. There were 162 x-ray cases, 48 accident cases and 281 operating room cases, including the accident cases. Thirteen social service calls were made at the hospital and 21 at homes. Twenty two patients were transferred by the social service car.

The Fourth of July was an unusually dull and uneventful day at the hospital. There were no accident cases caused by celebrations of the day the only two accident cases treated being one of a man slightly lacerated in the head and another that of a little girl in which while riding a scooter had a fall in which she was cut a bit on the cheek.

There was one baby born on the Fourth, a little girl.

Miss Maud McBey of St. John, N. B., has completed her course as student dietitian and returned to her home for the summer. Miss Dorothy Moxon of Willimantic, Conn., a graduate of Lasell Seminary, began her course as student dietitian on Sunday the fifth.

An officer detailed by the Newton police department has been co-operating with the members of the building and grounds committee in studying the parking problem at the hospital. The parking space is somewhat limited and those parking do not always do so to the best advantage so that there is often the appearance of congestion when there is really room for more cars.

Mr. Max Cohen of Auburndale has given to the hospital some three hundred plants including zinnias, marigolds and salvia and they have been planted to good advantage about the grounds.

Miss Margaret Tolan, telephone operator at the hospital for the past year, was operated on as an emergency appendicitis case last Saturday morning. Miss Tolan is not altogether comfortable yet but is getting along as well as can be expected. During her absence Miss Anna Dixon will serve as telephone operator.

In her report to the trustees at the June meeting Miss Allen, the superintendent of the hospital, told them something of the needs of the hospital in the way of operating rooms. In June all operating room records were broken. Two hundred and eighty one patients were brought in without warning all needing immediate surgical treatment for injuries received at their work. On one occasion it was necessary to use an operating room the only dressing room the nurses have. We of the hospital who are used to the conditions under which our people must work under our present hospital accommodations understand the reasons for it but what of our patients who have heard always of the quiet of the operating room, of the low voiced nurses and doctors? What must they think when rolled into the midst of such confusion and left in the corridor to listen and think and dread while awaiting their turn. Can anyone who knows the conditions doubt that a larger operating suite is one of the hospital's crying needs?

DEATH OF MISS ANGLER

Miss Emma Elizabeth Angler, a life long resident of this city, died early Sunday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Charles F. Governor Fuller is taking the right stand in protesting against any strike on the Elevated road and he will be backed to the limit in taking the position that any employee going on a strike shall never be employed by the Elevated again. The action of the men in voting for a strike on such a flimsy pretext as that of the method of arbitration was a species of bravado which the Governor rightfully refused to recognize. Massachusetts showed what it thought of strikes of this nature in 1919 and the temper of our people has not changed the past six years.

The Playground department very properly urges parents to send their children to the various playgrounds maintained by the city instead of allowing them to play on the sidewalks and streets. It ought not to take the death of a small boy on the streets of Brighton this week to bring this very wise suggestion right home to every father and mother. Newton spends nearly $80,000 each year for playground maintenance and supervision. Why neglect the advantages of playground opportunities?

Papers are in circulation for enough names to place the question of acceptance or rejection of the new compulsory automobile insurance law on the ballot at the state election next year. It would seem that if the public fully realized the importance and the necessity for legislation of this sort and we trust that every voter in Newton will refuse to sign any petition of this nature.

The retirement of Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark from the presidency of the United Society of Christian Endeavor organization which he founded some 38 years ago, calls attention to the remarkable growth of that society under his inspired leadership and to the betterment of the world and religion due to that organization.

Miss Louise W. Pray, who for thirty years, has taught the kindergarten class at the Underwood school, was one of the most beloved teachers in the city, and her death will be deeply and sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends.

CITY HALL

Buildings Commissioner Chadwick calls our attention to the fact that we were in error in stating last week that the building permits for the month of June were the largest in the history of the city. Mr. Chadwick says that the department has averaged well over a million dollars each month of the present year and that the month of April was the largest with a total of over $1,600,000.

Street Commissioner Stuart reports that bids were received Wednesday for building about 2035 ft. of pipe sewers in Chestnut, Fuller and Dartmouth streets.

Following is a list of the bidders with their amounts: A. D. Daddario, Mattapan, $18,967.65; A. Cefalo, Roslindale, $19,977.99; W. B. Bryne, W. Medford, $21,152.70; John Williams & Co., $22,601.20; A. Daddario, Mattapan, $25,450.90; A. Baruffaldi, W. Somerville, $26,132.35; James A. Chesarene, N. U. Falls, $27,231.25; DeCristoforo Bros. HOLIDAY READING

July 10, 1925. Vacation is a time to do something different from one's daily round all the rest of the year. If, during the winter, your time to read comes only in brief snatches, or your mind is burdened with the cares of your business or your home life or intensive study of some sort, perhaps your casual reading may consist largely of fiction or the lighter forms of literature. In that case you will welcome the summer, when you can take time to read at leisure something of a different character—a friendly biography, a delightful book of travel, something about your favorite hobby, or a stimulating discussion of some one of the many questions that press upon the attention of mankind, or even some of the older fiction. On the other hand, if you must read intensively along serious or technical lines as a part of your daily work, the summer brings a brief season when you can feel free to enjoy a bit of pleasant diversion among books, when a volume of essays in the lighter vein, or a "bang-up" good story is a real rest.

There are so many lines of choice that it is difficult to make any selection; but the following are hints along several interesting lines: The Newton Free Library will gladly assist you in further selections for vacation reading. iv:nc hyau the mstrengt &...sts Travel: Dixon's "Westward Hoboes" G93-D64 (Ups and downs of frontier motoring in Western United States) Carpenter's "Australia, New Zealand, and some islands of the South Seas." THE NEWTON ARCHERS

Many of the Newton Archers spent all or part of the last week at the Eastern Archery Association Tournament at Deerfield, Mass. About 60 archers, from all parts of the country, and of the Mississippi attended, and 26 men and 16 women of these competed. Paul W. Crouch, who shoots often with the Newton Archers, broke all records and came out champion of the York and American Rounds. In the double American round of 150 arrows, he made every arrow hit, surpassing former records of 179 hits only.

Miss Dorothy Smith of Newton Centre came out champion of the National and Columbia rounds. Mrs. Burton Payne Gray of Newton Centre won the 30 yard range medal and the novelty shoot. Miss Eleanor True of Waban won the 40 yard range medal, the clout shoot, first prize and a medal for the most clouts. The association enthusiastically voted to continue meeting at Deerfield and re-elected the same officers. Miss Ruth Brewer of Newton Centre, the Secretary-Treasurer, is the only Newton officer.

The following boys leave Friday for Camp Frank A. Day: D. Lowell, J. Gordon, L. Potter, F. Wing and E. Meehan. Everything is going very well at the camp and all the boys are having a fine time. Two war canoes have been added to the equipment this year, and there is much competition among the campers. Baseball, water sports, tennis, hikes, and the many other activities which camp-life affords are enjoyed to the fullest extent at Camp Day for all programs are carefully planned and supervised by competent leaders.

Camp Frank A. Day is becoming so popular that it may be necessary to limit the camp registration to Newton boys. Waltham, Watertown, and Brighton will be included in the Newton district.

DR. LEWIS HONORED

Dr. Warren K. Lewis of Lombard street, Newton, head of the department of Chemical Engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been elected an honorary member of the British Institution of Chemical Engineers in recognition of his notable achievements in chemical engineering in this country, according to advices received at Tech today.

The British Institution of Chemical Engineers has during its existence elected only five honorary members of which Dr. Lewis and Prince Conti of Italy are the only ones living outside England.

Dr. Lewis was graduated from Tech in the class of 1905 and received the degree of doctor of philosophy from Breslau University, Germany, in 1908. He joined the faculty of Tech in 1910 and was made a full professor in 1914. In 1920 when the department of chemical engineering was established he was appointed its head. During 1917 and 1918 Dr. Lewis was a civilian expert in the United States Chemical Warfare Service. He is a member of the American Chemical Society; the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and of the American Leather Chemists Association.

SUMMER BIBLE SCHOOL

On Wednesday morning of this week the enrollment at the Summer Bible School held at the Newtonville Methodist Episcopal Church reached sixty-two. For the first three days of the school the Primary Group made up of boys and girls six to eight years of age maintained a daily percentage of attendance of 100 while the older groups averaged over 97. It would be difficult to find a school of its kind with a record as commendable.

One girl asked, "Why can't we have school in the afternoon too?" Another who wasn't very enthusiastic about starting to the school commented "I'm not going to miss a day of school." The school meets every morning except Saturday and Sunday. Certificates will be given to all those attending at least two weeks. Registration closes next Monday.

DEATH OF MISS PRAY

Miss Louise W. Pray, one of the best loved school teachers in the city died Tuesday morning at the Newton Hospital. Miss Pray was born in Dorchester and was 65 years of age. For 30 years she has been in charge of the kindergarten at the Underwood school having entered the employ of the city in September, 1895. For a few years previous she had been a teacher in the Brookline schools. Funeral services were held from her home on Chester street, Watertown, yesterday afternoon. Rev. F. W. Lockwood officiating and the interment was at Walnut Hills, Brookline.

FAITH

Faith is not blind acceptance of absurdity. Faith is the completion of a transaction, in which we commit ourselves to a personal relationship with an unseen and living Master. Faith is such an adventure as every sailor makes when he sets out for an unseen port. Faith is our response to our yearning for the God who has made us for fellowship with Himself. Faith is the answer of the vibrant human spirit to the music of Eternity. —Ozora S. Davis

Tenor's Singing Saved Two From Awful Death

The late Joseph Maas, the famous tenor, during a visit to the United States some years ago, was very fond of hunting the buffalo on the prairies. When engaged in this sport on one occasion with his friend, Boucault, the celebrated Irish actor, they were suddenly attacked by a number of Indians in the dusk of the evening, while far from their encampment. Bound hand and foot, the captives were dragged to the Indians' halting place, where a fire was made. While awaiting their fate, fearing that that night would be their last, Boucault said to his friend: "Joe, sing for me." Maas, who had never sung in such terrible circumstances, tearfully complied with his friend's request, and began to sing some old favorites, recalls the Family Herald. The Indians pricked up their ears and leaned forward to listen as the great tenor's voice thrilled through the night air. When he stopped they pricked him with their spears, saying, "More, more," and he was compelled to continue. Song after song he sang, until at length he noticed that one by one the Indians were dropping off to sleep round the fire. When the last man had dropped off to sleep Maas crawled to a knife lying on the ground and managed to cut Boucault's bonds, and his friend then quickly released him.

Chinaman Sails Junk in His Own Fashion

The oldest seagoing vessels of the world are the junks of the Yellow sea of China. These junks are "highly decorated vessels, with tall poops and decorated sides, reminiscent of the days of Drake and Columbus."

"Junks of this type are in existence still which were built in the time of Kien Lung, say some 150 years ago," says the London Yachting Monthly.

"A junk will not heave to, and John Chinaman is fully aware of this. He doesn't even try; his plan is far simpler. He lets his halyards go with a run, and the sail is off his vessel in a moment. The high poop acts as a riding mizzen and brings him head to wind; the low bow prevents him from falling off the wind."

"If the blow is likely to last any time, he lays out a sea anchor. His next procedure is to burn a joss stick and probably a few pieces of paper to his household god. After that, as there is nothing more to do except eat or sleep—he does so."

Missed Accustomed Noise

Along the Irish coast are lighthouses which fire a signal gun at three-minute intervals during foggy weather. To a visitor the noise is irritating and unbearable, making sleep an impossibility; but to the seasoned lighthouse-keeper not only does the monotonous boom pass unnoticed, but a break in its regularity reacts as a disturbance.

An old Irishman of long service slept soundly and peacefully during a winter night while his wife fired the roaring three-minute signals—that is, he rested comfortably until by some shortcoming one of the charges failed to explode.

Instantly he awoke, sat up, gazed wildly around, and shouted, "Maggie! What the deuce was that?"

Coca-Chewing Evil Habit

The chief vice of the Indians and half-breeds of Bolivia is chewing coca. A man who has the habit can always be detected by the immense lump in his cheek. The general effect of the drug is to dull the nerves and stiffen the resistance to fatigue. Under its influence natives can endure great hardships and physical strain. Many of them will work for days at a time on nothing except coca leaves, which they begin to chew at breakfast time and continue to chew throughout the day. As with all narcotics, the persistent use of coca wrecks the nervous system and dulls the intellect.—Youth's Companion.

How He Felt

There had been a shipwreck and the passengers were taken to various houses in the neighborhood to be made comfortable. They were received as guests of importance in one home and conversation was essayed. There were no fatalities I understand," said one, "but how did you feel when the waves dashed over you and you thought each moment might be your last?" "Very wet, madam, very wet," was the reply.

Took It Literally

The two were discussing the careless way in which trunks and suitcases are handled by some railway companies.

"I had a very cute idea for preventing that once," said one of them, smiling reminiscently. "I labeled each of my bags, 'With care—China.'"

"And did that have any effect?" asked the other.

"Well, I don't know; you see, they shipped the whole darned lot off to Hongkong."

Compositions of Oil

Olive oil is practically 100 per cent fat and has energy value of about 4,000 calories per pound. The Association of Official Agricultural Chemists includes among edible vegetables oils and fats of sufficient importance to warrant standardizing the oils of cottonseed, peanut, sesame seed, poppy seed, coconut, rapeseed, sunflower and maize. Of these peanut oil bears the closest resemblance to olive oil in its chemical and physical properties.

faith in that agreement weakens, we shall have a Constitution written on crumbling parchment, not on the hearts of a people. Such a Constitution is worth no more than the parchment on which it is written. If the authority of the Constitution rests in our faith, and we withdraw that faith, the Constitution will cease to be a vital influence in the nation's life, and will become merely a scrap of paper.

Our Constitution will live as the embodiment of the spirit of good government only when its growth and development are brought about by our intelligent thought and activity; when through our selfishness and willingness to recognize the rights of the other man, it unifies this people, and protects their liberties; when we are willing to give it authority by our faith in its principles. There is no Constitution aside from the people whose expression it is. Each generation hands on to the succeeding generation a Constitution enriched or impoverished by its experience. Democracy depends solely upon its citizens. The ultimate responsibility for our government rests upon us. Are we meeting this responsibility?

Today we are faced with a situation in which men are refusing to accept this responsibility which democracy places upon their shoulders. We are placing a false trust in a Constitution written in the eighteenth century, forgetting that the only vital effective Constitution is the one written in the twentieth century on the heart of each citizen. We have forgotten that there is no Constitution aside from the people whose expression it is.

We have forgotten that the only assurance of the rational development of our Constitution is found in the intelligent thought and activity of the American citizen. The records show that last November, 50 per cent of the qualified voters failed to go to the polls. We are failing to use the very tools which the Constitution has placed in our hands, in order that government might meet the growing needs of the nation.

There is a growing tendency among Americans to let their vision of national unity be obscured by individual, sectional and political viewpoints. We allow ourselves to judge a law good or bad as it affects our own particular interests. We want speed laws but we want to choose whether or not we shall obey them. We force our Congressmen to stand on a platform of party supremacy rather than of national unity. We proclaim religious freedom in our Constitution and then fight in our political conventions over the religious beliefs of a candidate. We challenge at every turn the giving of more power to the national government so that that government is not able to regulate child labor, or pass a uniform marriage and divorce law, or bring about other needed national reforms. While such tendencies exist, we are asking the impossible when we expect the Constitution to unify our nation.

Many so-called Americans do not hesitate to regard their individual liberty as more sacred than the liberty of all the people. The right of any man to traffic in alcohol has been declared by the majority to be a menace to this country's business, to its schools and to its homes. While men still insist on their right to disregard the will of the majority, and other men just as guilty, allow such a practice to go unchallenged, it is but sheer mockery to call the Constitution the guardian of the rights of all the people.

If men will exchange their faith in the Constitution for a belief in their own power to determine what is best for them, regardless of the interests of other men, what is left of our Constitution but a relic of the eighteenth century, powerless and without authority for our generation or any future generations?

These are only a few examples of the danger that faces our Constitution; a danger which is a challenge to the patriotism of every man and woman who dares to call himself an American.

We are citizens of a great republic. We know from experience that within the borders of our country there are many States, each with its own interests; that there are many races, each with its own peculiar characteristics; that there are 100,000,000 people—each with different ideas and ideals. We have found it necessary and desirable to formulate a supreme law of the land which embodies the highest ideas and ideals of the whole nation.

To meet the growing needs of the nation, this supreme law must grow and develop. But may this development never be brought about by the passing whim of a passion-controlled people. Rather let it result from the intelligent thought and activity of a people who understand and accept their responsibility.

To meet the demands of a large nation, this supreme law must unify all interests. But may it never again be forced to depend on the bayonet for its power. Rather may men and States be willing to sacrifice their selfish desires in order that this nation might be one!

To fulfill its great purpose, this supreme law must safeguard the liberties of all the people. May this purpose be realized, not through force, but through the willingness of every man to recognize the rights of his fellow-citizens.

To accomplish these ends the supreme law must have authority. But may this authority not come from any force that is applied from without. But rather let it arise from the faith that is to be found in the heart of every true American.

Slowly the old parchment in the capital at Washington, will crumble into dust. Each succeeding year will find those words and the signatures of the fathers of our country less distinct than the year before. But if its words are written deep on the heart of each succeeding generation—if each American is willing to shoulder his responsibility, the spirit of good government will be handed down from father to

BASE BALL

The West Newton A. A. colored boys stopped the winning streak of the Brighton Catholic Institute at Rogers Park on Wednesday, July 8.

Before this game the Brighton team had not lost a game, defeating some of the strongest teams of Greater Boston. Yet they were unable to solve the pitching Lomax, who stopped the heavy hitters of the home team.

While at short stop Larkin stopped many hits, throwing the runners out at first, along with the batting of Taylor were the features of the West Newton team.

The all around work of Fitzgerald of the Brighton team stood out the best.

On Thursday evening the West Newton A. A. colored, lost to the strong Newton Y. M. C. A. team by the score of 4-2, at the West Newton Common.

The "Y" team took the home team on their feet, scoring four runs in two innings off McCleary the Newton High pitcher, who settled down, not allowing a "Y" player to reach second base during the remainder of the game.

Barnes of the "Y" team also pitched a strong game, holding the batting team of the colored boys to seven hits.

Forsyth at short stop and Ryan at second, gave him wonderful support, stopping some very hard-hit balls, especially Ryan, who saved the game, when with three men on bases, stopped a most difficult grounder, throwing out the runner.

As each team has won a game, they will play the deciding game August 3rd, Monday evening, at the West Newton Common.

Monday evening, July 13, at the West Newton Common, the West Newton A. A. colored, will play the Earnshaw Mills.

Having defeated the larger majority of the teams they have played, they are out to try defeat the Colored boys, and will send their best pitcher, Hauck, against the home team.

The home team will be strengthened with the addition of "Sheep" Jackson, the fast Malden High School player, who has cast his lot with the West Newton team, adding more speed.

This game will start at 6:00 P. M., to give the spectators nine innings of base ball.

WIN TWO GAMES

The Newton Pals, chalked up two big wins over the holiday, on Saturday afternoon, July 4th, defeating the West Newton A. C. at Auburndale, by a score of 7 to 5, and on Sunday afternoon, July 5th, defeating the Vale A. C. of Roxbury, at the J. J. Connelly playgrounds, by a score of 1 to 0.

The holiday game was marked by the brilliant playing of Jimmie Butler, Pals' third-sacker, who led at bat and turned in some sparkling plays in the field. Eddy Murphy also played a slashing game, driving in the winning runs with a single to left in the 7th inning.

The feature of the Sunday game was the air-tight pitching of "Chet" Aucoin, who allowed but 4 safe hits, struck out 10 men and allowed but one man to reach third base. He was accorded excellent support by his team-mates among which the superb fielding of Bernie Lyman and Jimmie Butler stood out. The game was fast played throughout and was marked by the errorless fielding of the Pals, and the completion of two fast double plays by the same team.

POLICE NOTES

The examination for street Sergeant in the Police Department, the position recently established by the Aldermen will take place at the State House today. The number of officers who will take the examination is considerably lessened by the provision that only men with at least five years' experience may compete. The seventh street sergeant has been added because of the injury sustained several weeks ago by Sergt. William Mahoney, making it impossible for him to return to street duty.

The police are in receipt of a letter from John Campbell, superintendent of the Edison Company, complimenting Sergeant Joseph Seaver and his detail for the handling of traffic last week, on the occasion of the outing of the Big Brother Club, when about 10,000 children and parents passed through Newton to Norumbega Park. The fact that there was not a single accident with so many unaccompanied children on the cars and streets is a tribute to the newly formed traffic squad, and to Sergeant Seaver, who superintended the transportation of the children.

If you aim at nothing, you'll hit it, all right.

We pass this way but once. Let's make the going pleasant.

POLICE NOTES

There was an interesting test of the new gas bottles and gas grenades at Police headquarters yesterday morning. Some time ago when the exhibition before police officials was given at the Army Base, South Boston, Chief Bernard F. Burke attended and purchased a gas billy for the use of the Newton Department and a number of hand grenades. The grenades are carried on the patrol and there is a stock of them at Headquarters ready for use. Yesterday morning the officers assembled in the city garage, where the hand grenade was explained and then Mr. Secord suddenly hurled a grenade into the group. As the tear gas fumes swept through the garage there was a mad rush for doors and for the next half-hour handkerchiefs were at a premium among the officers. The gas billy was discharged into the fleeing mob of officers in the yard and within a minute the square was cleared.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER

Written by
Leverett D. G. Bentley

Yes, we who stayed in the home town on the Fourth of July actually heard some noise. The incident so surprised us that we started an investigation on our own hook. We wandered over the city in search of the cause. The only fireman who was awake told us that it couldn't have occurred in Newton as nothing had come to the department's attention. The policeman whose peaceful smoke we interrupted asked us what inspired us to spring such jokes on a holiday that was not April Fool's day. We were about to quit our quest when we found the true reason for the disturbance. A number of business men had read of the increase in the city's population. They were patting themselves and each other on the back over the fact the census of 1925 showed a jump to 50,000. We could almost hear them say they were going out to "sell Newton," with the aid of printed matter obtained in Watertown. Now we have not the slightest objection to this "boosting," although we do not participate. We insist that our suggestion was a good one and although it has not been adopted is worth while. There are available for the purpose platforms, circular in shape and not more than two feet in diameter. These are equipped with a railing and above may be placed a sun-umbrella if necessary. The advantages are numerous, as has already been stated in this column. In Nonantum Square, for instance, people getting off cars rush to the traffic policeman and ask questions. Only the other day we saw the officer surrounded. He was almost hidden from view and had to stand on his toes, and he was a tall man at that, to make himself seen at a distance. How much easier for everybody if he were mounted on one of these inexpensive platforms!

Not long ago we had something to say about the use of traffic platforms for policemen assigned to traffic duty in the squares of the city. We still insist that our suggestion was a good one and although it has not been adopted is worth while. There are available for the purpose platforms, circular in shape and not more than two feet in diameter. These are equipped with a railing and above may be placed a sun-umbrella if necessary. The advantages are numerous, as has already been stated in this column. In Nonantum Square, for instance, people getting off cars rush to the traffic policeman and ask questions. It has been some time since we have touched upon the delicate subject of telephone courtesy. We still believe that there is ample opportunity to preach the doctrine of good manners as applied to conversations over the wire. In this instance, however, we are not going to lament but shall attempt to describe an incident that recently came under our observation and which, we believe, will be relished by our readers. One of those brusque individuals who probably prides himself that he is "all business" received a shock, and also a lesson. He desired an appointment with another business man and in order to obtain it had to talk with the other's private secretary. The latter, experienced in handling all sorts of people, promised the first business man he would call the matter to his employer's attention. That was all there was to the beginning. Later, the first business man became impatient, called up the secretary and wanted to know why he hadn't heard from him. The secretary started to explain that his employer had been suddenly called away and was unable to make any appointment. In the midst of the secretary's explanation the first business man abruptly hung up. He might have waited until the secretary had finished. Perhaps it is too much to expect that he should say, "Thank you." The secretary was nettled at the flagrant act of discourtesy. Instead of letting it go at that, he called the first business man up on the telephone. "Well, what do you want now?" demanded the brusque individual. "I only want to say this," the secretary replied, "no gentleman hangs up a telephone receiver when somebody is politely addressing him."

the most approved and up-to-date manner as far as finances permit. We still believe that there is much to be done at City Hall. The zoning ordinance is an achievement, but if we are correctly informed the citizens themselves and not the city government demanded this needed reform and insisted upon its establishment. There is still opportunity for progress in this city, not in noisy speech-making kind, but that based on definite plans with something more than blue-prints to support them. It is a fine thing to boast of "growing in population," but the folks at City Hall can do more for the plain citizens than the mere application of a coat of paint to the ancient municipal structure.

It has been some time since we have touched upon the delicate subject of telephone courtesy. We still believe that there is ample opportunity to preach the doctrine of good manners as applied to conversations over the wire. A letter has been addressed to us by a reader who signs himself "Narrow S. Kape." The signature, like the letter, seems to possess sufficient significance to warrant printing the communication in this column. "You have so consistently championed the interests of the bicycle-riders, that I, a large majority who ride exclusively on the sidewalks of Newton, that I feel you will be eager for my new ideas," says our correspondent. "I am not old and I am not young and as it happens I have travelled not only in this country but on the European continent as well as in the Orient. I find, however, that I can still hand the palm to my own countrymen, yes, to my fellow citizens, for putting over something brand new, as the classical phrase expresses it. The other day I was ambling along Vernon street, where frequently I encounter those sidewalk-riding cyclists. Thanks to your advice I now refuse to give way to them and firmly stand my ground. I find that they usually turn off in the roadway where they belong, though not until they have given me a severe look. On the day in question I was determined to pursue the usual course should any of these sidewalk hounds appear. Let me say that I weakened. And I believe, if you would have thrown up your hands, had you been placed in the same predicament. Headed toward me were two boys on their bicycles, riding side by side and on the concrete walk. Here was a new wrinkle. Two sidewalk-fleas, and no room for pedestrians! I thought of your advice, so frequently printed in the Graphic, but I could recall no mention in your writings of how to act when one meets two bicycle riders side by side. I simply gave way and leaped for the gutter, where, I suppose, a foot passenger in this glorious city of ours really belongs. I am not going to embarrass you by asking you what you would have done under the circumstances. The fact is I didn't intend to write this as a complaint. I thought of it as a suggestion to those who use our sidewalks as bicycle paths. Here, then, is a new idea for them. It is this—if you want to see people jump in fear you will feel more enjoyment as a bicyclist if there is someone to share the fun with you."

For the benefit of the uninitiated (meaning those unfamiliar with the doings of the Great and General Court of Massachusetts) let it be said that there is provided, at public expense, a bound document known as "The Manual of the General Court." It is intended for use of the legislators but is of even greater convenience to State departments, newspaper reporters, newspaper offices, public libraries, etc. It contains not only the names of the members of the General Court but the membership of the various State commissions, boards of trustees, judges of all courts, legislative committees, the constitution of the United States, the State constitution, names of elective officers of the commonwealth and the rules of both branches. Quite a handy volume for those interested in and who have dealings with the capitol and its occupants. Heretofore 13,500 copies have been printed for distribution. Of this number each of the 280 members of the General Court have been allowed 34 each. This disposed of 9520 copies. The remainder were sent to public libraries, distributed to city and town clerks and used by State departments and newspaper men. The wave of economy started by the former chairman of the Commission on Administration and Finance has caused the number of printed copies to be reduced to 10,500. Now the members of the Legislature receive 29 each and the people who used to get them from the clerks of the two branches get one each—if they are lucky. The cutting-down has been brought about to save printing costs. This year it has done more than that, it has saved wear and tear, for the copies were not printed and available until nearly eight weeks after the Legislature had been prorogued. They will be good for next year, at least in part, in spite of the fact there are invariably changes in the Legislature, the State departments, the courts, etc. We were about to say a few words in criticism of this reduction of the supply of manuals, but we feel that we would be open to censure as advocating spendthrift methods. Therefore we will content ourselves by warning our readers that they cannot expect to go to the State House like they could in the old days and obtain a manual and a pleasant smile, but they must appeal to their local Representative. And if there are 29 of his constituents ahead of them they will not get a copy. Love, money or tears will not avail. Thus an official record of the State Government is to be restricted to a select few—a very select few. And yet we hear State officials in public addresses, urging the greater interest on the part of the voters in matters of State government.

English Cathedrals Go Far Back in History

The great cathedrals of England in many instances replace former edifices that were erected by the early Christians who formed part of the ancient British church, and which were later destroyed by fire or otherwise, a writer in the Montreal Family Herald relates. For instance, Canterbury cathedral was first built in 605, on the site of an old church dating from very early ages. It was destroyed by fire in 1600, and Archbishop Langfanc, on taking office in 1670, undertook the rebuilding of an entirely new church. This lasted until about 1100, when under Ansieuf Langfanc's successor, Erulf rebuilt the eastern part. A fire destroyed most of the portion of the building in 1174, and from that year William of Sens took up the work of rebuilding until 1178, when, on his suffering severe injury by falling from a scaffold, another William, commonly distinguished as "the Englishman," carried on the work and completed it in 1184. Many alterations and changes have been made during the ensuing centuries. I might mention that as early as 668, Theodors of Tarsus, of the city of St. Paul, was elected archbishop of Canterbury, not appointing both the king of Northumbria and the king of Kent acquiescing in his election. He was the first archbishop to receive the allegiance of the whole of the English church.

Early Georgia Settler Picked Location Wisely

In 1835 Pickens county, Georgia, was peopled by the Cherokee Indians. I that year, one Sam Tate moved in and settled eight miles from any other white neighbor. He was first of the ground when the government moved the Cherokees out to Indian territory in 1837. He staked off his pick of the lands left by the Indians and his claim embraced, among other things, the finest marble deposit in the United States and one of the most valuable in the world. It still belongs to the Tate family. There is only one vein of Georgia marble, and the old man got it all—a solid block three-eighths of a mile wide, four miles long and two hundred feet to a half mile deep, the estimated worth of which, according to experts, run up to $165,000,000,000, and is still running. It has been worked now for more than fifty years and in all that time they have only scratched the surface of about three acres of it. They have dug out of it such buildings as the Corcoran Art gallery and the Pan American building in Washington, the Rhode Island state capitol, the New York Stock exchange, the Federal Reserve banks of Cleveland and Atlanta, the Field museum in Chicago, the Statue of Civic Virtue in New York city, and thousands of lesser monuments, but you would hardly know it.—W. O. Saunders in Collier's.

Location of Famous London Well Unknown

Even before the Norman conquest the holy well of St. Clement, London, used to be the scene of many pilgrimages, and these continued until the Reformation. It used to be the favorite trysting place for lads and lassies on summer evenings, in the time when the Strand of London was a country road and not the important London thoroughfare it is today. The site of the old well is believed to lie somewhere between the law courts in the Strand and St. Clement's inn.

Within a few yards of the site of the well stands the church of St. Clement, whose bells are famed in nursery rhyme. Here Doctor Johnson used to have a pew, but there is no record of his ever having visited the well—which was only bricked over when the present law courts were built.—Kansas City Star.

The Old Stage Coach.

The first stage coach was run in England in the latter part of the sixteenth century. In this country the first coach was run between New York and Boston in 1782. In 1790 one between New York and Philadelphia.

One of the most unpleasant duties in royal courts of the Middle Ages—and later—was the breaking of bad news to the sovereign; not only unpleasant, in fact, but actually dangerous. Monarchs had not then arrived at the state of enlightenment which they are alleged to have reached nowadays. They really believed themselves to be as described in their titles—God-appointed, Ever-Victorious, and so on. And, often being in point of character either unmitigated physical brutes or feeble-minded results of inbreeding, they experienced the reactions of ill-bred children when their vanities or their purses were touched. On receipt of bad news, they felt like smashing something; and the most obvious something was the messenger. To dash out the kneeling man's brains with a mace or slash his head off with a sword was a most convenient and logical method of revenge on one's royal self on the nasty old world.

The fear of death is the real motive of invention. The courtiers' messages are sometimes masterpieces of hinting.

Witness the method of informing a French king that his supposedly invincible navy had been vanquished by the English under most humiliating circumstances.

The court jester took a cup of wine and asked the king to drink to the confusion of the cowardly English.

"Cowardly?" asked the king.

"Yes," said the jester. "They have so proved themselves in a sea battle. For when your brave Normans jumped out of their ships into the sea, the English dared not follow them."—By F. R. Buckley in Adventure Magazine.

Few Old Wells Found on the Modern Farm

The old well, always concealed except as one might peer down its dusky depths and speculate vainly as to the mysteries it might conceal, imagination heightened by tales of murders committed and the victims thrown into the abandoned hole, is now rarely marked by curb and more rarely by sweep, says a writer in the Springfield Republican.

The invention of the bucket and chain, by which one turned a crank and caused the water to flow forth in unbroken stream, ended the well-sweep's day. Then came the pump, and the pump came to have its place indoors. And others laid water pipes to springs, and pressure obviated the use of pumps with them. And the town grew, and arrived the day of the water system, and even the semi-detached farmhouse "connected up."

So at last, with all these encroaching changes, the old well became covered with thick stone slabs, and so most of them remain, safely concealed from view, unless, still in use, the welfare even of the cattle requires a renovation, and it is somehow safely accomplished.

What One's Eyes Tell

We are told that the eyes of the intellectual man are gray, and it is a fact that most men of genius have gray eyes. Brown eyes are said to express temperament rather than intellect.

Although brown eyes flash with anger, light up with joy, and change swiftly with jealousy, blue and gray eyes can express greater sadness, says London Tit-Bits.

Green and black eyes are supposed to be the most wicked. Becky Sharp's green eyes played an important part in her various conquests.

The "vamp" in modern fiction usually possessed flashing eyes of either green or black. Actually there are no black eyes; dark brown or dark gray eyes have the appearance of being black in certain lights.

The Unpardonable Sin

Theologians differ as to the exact nature of the unpardonable sin, which is the sin against the Holy Spirit. In Matthew 12:31, 32, Jesus says: "Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men, but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, nor in the world to come." In I John 5:16 a "sin unto death" is referred to.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Parcel Post Auction

When the various post offices of the country hold parcel post auction to dispose of lost or undeliverable parcels sent in the mails, the auctioneer conducts a veritable grab bag. Here is what one auction listed, after the sales were made: Speedometers, corsets, Christmas tree trimmings, cigars, thread, corkscrews, kiddie cars, razors, flags, manure sets, horseshoe nails, gentleman's suit, auto horns, skid chains, nightdresses, musical instruments and towels.

Beating the Drummer

Said the town philosopher: "A drummer from town saw me settin' on the fence watchin' the trains go by the other day. An' he said to me, 'My, but I couldn't stand livin' out here. You don't see anything. You don't travel like I do. I'm goin' all the time.'"

"I looked the fellow over an' then I said kinder slow an' easy, 'I can't see much difference in what I'm doin' an' what you're doin'." I set on the fence an' watch the trains go by. It's just the way you look at things."—Southwestern Agriculturist.

At 8.30 the holiday evening a Ford coupe owned by Thomas F. Hennessey and operated by Richard E. Kelley of Waltham ran into a pole on Washington street, opposite Greenough street, West Newton. James Wasson, 43 Pine street, West Newton, who was riding in the machine was badly cut. Kelley left the machine at the scene of the accident and went away. Police officer Goddard found the injured man about a quarter of a mile away and sent him to the hospital. Later he was taken to the police station and charged with drunkenness. In court Friday was found not guilty.

Last Friday afternoon, Richard Van Arsdale, age 3, of Walnut street, Newton, suffered a broken leg, and lacerations of the head when he ran from in front of his father's machine which was parked in front of the Arsdale home, directly into the path of a milk truck, owned by the Whiting Milk Co., and operated by James E. Lyons of Watertown. Ben Egan took the lad into his machine and reported the accident to the traffic officer at the corner of Commonwealth avenue and Walnut street. About 1 P. M. last Friday afternoon a collision took place at the corner of Lowell avenue and Otis street between a Durant touring car owned and operated by E. J. THE NEWTON GRAPHIC

VOL. LIII.—NO. 45

NEWTON, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 17, 1925.

TERMS, $3.00 A YEAR

COMPULSORY INSURANCE

Representative Arthur W. Hollis, the only member of the Newton Delegation in the House and Senate to oppose the passage of the new law regulating compulsory automobile insurance gives the following reasons as his reasons for taking that position:—

(1) It aims at compensation instead of prevention therefore it will not reduce the number of accidents. It simply provides payment for injuries received. It puts a price upon a life or a broken arm or a broken leg. I maintain that it is better to prevent the life from being lost or the injuries from being received rather than to provide compensation. This legislation in my opinion will increase the number of accidents. A careless, reckless driver will not be any more careful when someone else is paying for the injuries he may inflict. If he is not careful when uninsured he certainly will not be when insured.

(2) It places a burden upon many for the benefit of few. The careful driver is obliged to buy something he does not need because of the actions of a few careless ones. The percentage of accidents where the injured party is unable to recover damages is comparatively small.

(3) It is a matter which cannot be regulated by legislation by the individual states. It is national and international. Any legislation passed should be uniform for all the States and if possible for Canada and Mexico also.

Instead of a Compulsory Insurance bill I am in favor of the passage and enforcement of laws with adequate penalties which will tend to keep drunken, reckless and irresponsible drivers from operating cars in the future. I am also in favor of the passage of legislation which will limit the speed at which a car may be operated. Laws of this nature, properly enforced, will in my opinion cut down the number of accidents and after all is not that what we desire to accomplish?

When you take your family out for a drive, which do you prefer—safety or damages?

If you are square enough to win the approval of your neighbors you don't need to worry much about what other folks think of you.

NATIONAL DEFENSE

Probably the finest single result accruing to the benefit of the United States as a result of the World War was the revised National Defense Act, which revised, brought up to date and took advantage of our military experiences in that war, a previous law passed in 1916.

Under this law the War Department is charged with the execution of it, and as our entire military scheme in time of peace is properly on a volunteer basis, it is fitting that a report be made to the people every year about what the War Department has done to carry out the law. To report to the people the progress of the steps taken to carry out the National Defense Act is then the primary object of the Defense Day test.

The following story may therefore be informative and interesting to the citizens of Newton.

The country is divided for the purpose of administration into 9 areas, each having about the same present population, called Corps areas. The New England States form one of these and is called the First Corps area. To each of these Corps areas is allocated by the War Department on recommendation of the Governors of the States concerned, a lot of troops to be raised in time of war after the consent of Congress has been obtained in each particular instance. The basis of this allocation is three field armies. Each army is composed of troops from three different sources, the Regular Army, the National Guard, and the Organized Reserves.

The Regular Army is maintained in time of peace, armed, equipped and trained ready for service at any time. Its big mission in peace time is to furnish instruction to the other components.

The National Guard is maintained armed, equipped and partially trained ready for duty as front line troops after a very short period of intensive training. The Organized Reserves are just what their name implies, organized to the extent of having each unit allocated to a community, its commissioned personnel assigned to it, and in addition a few of the enlisted men such as 1st Sergeants, supply sergeants, and mess sergeants. It is not contemplated that there shall be any

THE WINCHESTER LAUNDRIES

Newton Customers to be Served from its Impressive New Plant on Galen Street

Customers of This District to be Served from Very Impressive Building on Galen Street

The Winchester Laundries on Monday, July 20th, will move their Waltham Branch now located at 21 Crescent street, Waltham, to the newly completed building, 164 Galen street, Corner Williams street. The plant is to be dedicated to the ideals of service and greater perfection in laundering methods.

The growth of this concern in the last twenty-eight years has been a very interesting story. In a recent issue of The Hope Chest, the company's monthly publication, appeared the following business sketch of the founder of the business, Mr. Arthur T. Downer.

When Arthur T. Downer came to Winchester twenty-five years ago, he had $500 of his own and $1,000 which he borrowed. He paid $1,000 for the poorly equipped laundry that two young men had been running at a loss for several months, and with the remaining $500 he had to finance the business and support his family. This was not what any one would call a hopeful outlook.

"Back in those early days did you visualize the business as it exists today?" he was asked.

He laughed and said, "One day, several months after I had taken charge, I told my wife that I felt sure we could build up a business of $500 a week. That seemed big to me at the time. I thought that we could take life fairly easy, if we could get that much business."

One of his slogans was, "Use what you have where you are to get what you need." With the old equipment he set out to do the best work possible. It was not long, however, until he found that better work could be done with better equipment. But there was no money for the new machinery.

The easy way would have been to take things slowly and let the old equipment serve. But that would have been a violation of his code. The second best will not serve him when it is humanly possible to get the best. That was his way of thinking then. It is his way of thinking now.

No man likes to shoulder a heavy burden of debts, especially one who loves freedom. But Mr. Downer, looking at the growing community in need of a first-class laundry service, saw clearly that the people would not wait for him if he tried to build with old-fashioned conservatism. He saw clearly that he would have to take risks. He would have to adventure. He worked out part of his plan and took all the people who could help him into his confidence. He laughs now when he thinks of the way he approached machinery manufacturers.

"I have no money at all," he said in effect. "I can't buy your machinery if you insist upon holding to your regular terms. All I can say is that there is an opportunity for some one to build up a fine laundry in Winchester and, inasmuch as I'm already there, I suppose it is up to me to prove that I am the man for the job."

His enthusiasm was contagious. People instinctively believed in him. He was so dead in earnest, so energetic, so persistent, so confident that opposition faded away. He got what he needed. Today he wonders what made some of the manufacturers willing to accept such small payments from him. It was the magic in the man himself that worked that miracle.

If you are going to get a picture of the development of the Winchester Laundries, Incorporated, you must hold before you the picture of ten years of almost heart-breaking struggle. Debts were everywhere. Mr. Downer owned the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker. He kept his personal expenses down and paid a little on account. His creditors knew he paid what he could. He had no secrets from them. He was no bluffer. The truth served his purposes best.

As the years went on, his vision grew. Very early he determined to create an organization that would function without having all the burdens of leadership resting upon one man. To make himself unnecessary has been his purpose from the beginning. For that reason he has surrounded himself with men and women who share his vision and who have prepared themselves to carry the business still farther forward.

ATD's vision has always leaped ahead of immediate needs. When the sunlit concrete plant was being built, people called it "Downer's Folly." "Why put up a fine structure like that for a laundry? It meant bankruptcy. Any old building would do for a laundry. The very idea of such foolishness."

The building's creator said nothing, but he was not particularly surprised when the business grew until it

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

Monday evening about 9.30, as Louise G. Curtis of South Boston, was driving her Willys-Knight sedan west on Commonwealth avenue, she attempted to make a left turn into Lexington street at Auburndale, and collided with a Nash car owned and operated by Frederick F. Keough of South Boston. Gladys M. Nolan who was in the Nash car with Keough was taken to the Newton Hospital for treatment for a cut over the right eye.

Nineteen youngsters from Newton and Watertown, employees of an Oak Hill farm, were dumped into the street Monday morning when a truck in which they were riding was in a collision with a car owned and operated by William Weissinger of Glenwood avenue, Newton Upper Falls. The boys and girls were riding along Boylston street in a truck owned by Frank Beninati Sr., of 42 Calvary street, Waltham, and operated by his son, Frank Beninati Jr. Three of the occupants of the truck were taken to the Newton Hospital. Tony Marino of 22 Emerald street, Newton, was treated for cuts about the face and head; Josephine Todino of 62 Forest street, Watertown, bruises on the head; Jerry Leone of 11 Lincoln road, Newton, an injury to one of his arms.

DEATH OF MRS. GOLDING

Mrs. Martha Saunders Golding, the wife of Benjamin Merritt Golding, died Tuesday morning after a long illness at the Newton Hospital.

Mrs. Golding was born in Portland, Maine, on May 2, 1871, and was the daughter of Samuel T. Saunders and Mary (Foster) Saunders. Her father was head of the Thompson Carriage Works in Portland. She was married to Mr. Golding in 1893, at Portland, where they lived until 1895, when they removed to Boston, living there until six years ago, since which time they had made their home on Clyde street, Newtonville.

Mrs. Golding was a member of the Newtonville Woman's Club and St. John's Episcopal Church of Newtonville. Besides her husband, she leaves her father, who had made his home with her for the past several years. Funeral services were held yesterday at St. John's Episcopal Church, Rev. R. T. Long, the rector, officiating and the interment was at Mt. Auburn cemetery.

Someone remarks that what this country needs nowadays is not a real job for every man but a real man for every job.

CAUSE OF ACCIDENTS

If every parent, declares the A. L. A., could be made to realize that while the public streets are for the use of all, and children have as many rights and as great as automobilists and drivers of other vehicles, still those rights should and must be used intelligently and with proper regard for the dangers of which modern automobile traffic is held responsible.

It is the height of folly for a parent to exclaim: "My children have as good a right in the streets as anybody," and then allow the children to play there without warning, and with their immature minds wrongly filled up with such a statement. It creates an attitude of defiance in the child, toward drivers of cars, and leads to the habit of "daring" all drivers of passing vehicles, and sometimes with fatal results.

Many parents consider their children as "smart," that is, able to look out for themselves. Smart in childish repartee—of a more or less "sassy" nature and tinged with "sass" toward outsiders who come in contact with them in a correctional way. This is generally the class of boys who begin by "daring" autoists, making faces, throwing stones at them, and stealing rides on teams and trucks and street railway cars.

It is among boys of this class that many fatal accidents happen, while they escape death or serious injuries, they grow up to be an even worse type of offender against law and order. How to cope with such vices in the young is a problem that might be less serious if the home influences were different.

If some parents would not uphold their children in such active disrespect of the orderly and ordinary things in life, many of our child highway accidents would cease; and especially if all parents would try to understand that some of the real causes of accidents are created and allowed to develop in the home.

THE POSTAGE STAMP

I am licked before I start, but I always deliver the goods. I am not only licked—I am stamped on. I am shoved into a corner. I nearly always get into a tight box, but I always get out. I may look like two cents, but what of it? I am stuck on my work, and I stay with it to the end. I'm the greatest piece of printing. That the business world knows; When a business gets to using me, You can bet that business grows—I'm just a little piece of paper. With the seal of Uncle Sam, But the business world without me Isn't worth a tinker's damn.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

The Newton League of Women Voters is occupied mainly in this first year of its life with a study of local conditions. But its members can not ignore the great national and international problems in which older Leagues are so absorbed. They were fortunate therefore, in being represented, through their President, at the luncheon given at the Boston City Club last Wednesday, when Miss Ruth Morgan, of New York, third Vice-President of the National League, gave an address.

The National League, following the expressed decision of the State and local Leagues, at its annual convention last April, adopted a program of work which includes the attempt to secure entry of the United States with the Permanent Court of International Justice. It is of this branch of the work that Miss Morgan has special charge.

Her address urged the need of effort to arouse public sentiment in favor of entry. Wittingly recognizing that the summer is no time for activities involving "the disintegration of families" she urged "talking schools" everywhere, in hotel parlors and on home piazzas. "Since we women will talk let us talk about the Court." Talk should be question and answer, discussion of the need and the advantages of the World Court. Few people except those who have studied the matter have a distinct idea about it, and intelligent talk on the subject would be often welcome. The League will have ready in a few days leaflets which may aid the halting tongue. Information about them may be obtained from the President of the Newton League, Dr. M. A. Wilcox, Newton North 2679-M, or from its Secretary, Mrs. Langley Roake, Newton North 4347.

BASEBALL

The West Newton A. A. colored team defeated the Earnshaw Mills nine at the West Newton Common on Monday evening last, by the score of seven to five.

The pitching ace, Hank, of the Earnshaw Mills, was no better to the heavy hitting team of the colored boys after the first inning, hitting two home runs off his delivery.

Earl Wheeler, the pitcher of the colored boys was a puzzle to the Earnshaw team.

As each team has won a game apiece they will play off the rubber game the latter part of August.

Tuesday evening the West Newton A. A. colored team went to Waltham and met defeat at the hands of the Waltham Baseball club, whom they defeated so easily a few weeks ago, before one of the largest crowds that have attended baseball games at Waltham by the score of six to four.

Many bad decisions by the umpire helped to cause the down fall of the colored boys, with all the breaks going toward the home team, but fought them all the way.

While the crowd gave them much encouraging applause all during the game for their lightning plays against the home team.

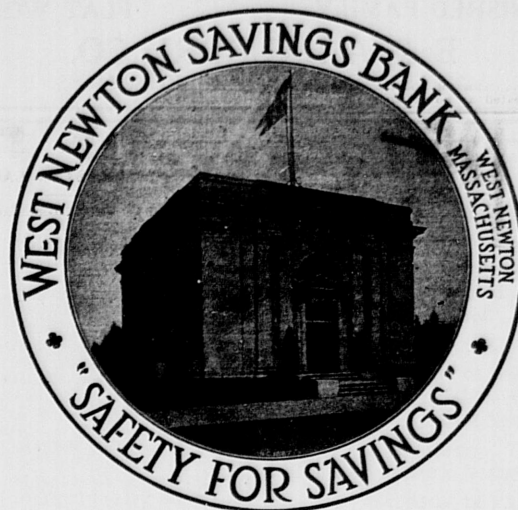

Monday evening, July 20, the fast Highland A. A. will play the colored boys at the West Newton Common.

They will bring with them Leahy, the former Newton high school and Canisus College pitcher, to put down the colored boys on their home grounds.

This game will start at 6.15 P. M., so that nine innings of baseball may be played for the spectators.

—Mrs. Charise Hawkes is visiting relatives in the West.

—Mr. W. S. Richards of Lake avenue, is at Sanbornville, New Hampshire.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER

Written by
 Leverett D. G. Bentley

It is not true that we are fond of scolding and we sincerely hope such an impression has not been created by some of the criticisms we have offered in the past. Not that we are going to withdraw any previous statement made in this column. On the contrary everything we have said in condemnation of anything or anybody was perfectly true, and as far as we are concerned we stand back of it today. It is for our personal comfort that we do not wish to acquire the habit of a common scold. There are too many warm days and too much humidity in the air, and to lash ourselves into a fury over small matters is stupid as well as exhausting. Therefore, what we are about to write is placed upon paper as the breezes blow upon us with soothing touch. We have had recent evidence of our appreciation of good cooking and our pipe never yielded greater comfort. On the whole we are most magnanimous in our spirit, and were we not mindful of the need of saving-up for our annual vacation we might be willing to lend money. We feel then that we are in a judicial mood and competent to sit in judgement upon the errors, blunders, offences and faults of our fellow creatures. There is, however, only one culprit on trial before us. He should have been haled into our court of justice, if not law, some time ago. We refer to the youth who jumps out in the road before passing automobilists and demands a ride. He is entirely too active these days. Of course he has a reason for so doing, and it is not his desire for entertainment that we condemn. It is his manner of approach. We suppose that if he were deferential he never would get a ride, and yet when he yells "Hey, give us a ride" we feel that he is too fresh in his manner. Were it our glorious privilege to possess a car we would never pull-up and offer a seat to anyone who practiced the methods of a hold-up man. Not long ago we rode with a man who is nothing if not generous and tender-hearted. He shares our views as to this pernicious practice of begging auto rides. On this occasion he stopped and said, "Get back on the sidewalk where you belong," and followed that command with a sound lecture on the danger of hopping about in front of moving cars. At Cottage Farm bridge on a recent afternoon we saw nine boys in a row, clamouring for rides. Every driver knows that Cottage Farm bridge is not the easiest place in which to drive through traffic. These youngsters caused several drivers to jam on brakes in order to avoid striking them or colliding with other cars. No doubt our readers can recount the numerous instances similar in character. The traffic problem is sufficiently complicated at best without adding an unnecessary nuisance, and the sooner steps are taken to stop the holding-up of machines the better it will be for all concerned. If auto-owners want to remedy conditions themselves they might refuse demands for rides by merely saying, "Sorry, but we haven't been introduced."

We venture to say there are many readers of this column who will envy us the possession of a souvenir of the Boston Museum printed in 1880. It was given us by a thoughtful friend who is always of our efforts to secure a theatrical library made up of the new and the old. It is seldom that a theatrical enterprise has won the affectionate regard of a fickle public, and yet the Boston Museum held that place. Although "a little before our time" as the saying goes, we are certain the days when that theatre flourished were days of great interest for patrons. For our older readers, and for those who have heard their fathers and mothers tell of the Boston Museum, we print the following taken from the announcement contained in the souvenir. It reads thus: "Promised for the season of 1880 and 1881 the management is disinclined to make. The purpose is to maintain the reputation of the establishment, and earnest effort shall not be wanting to merit a continuance of confidence and respect. To be called a 'Boston Institution' gives justifiable pride, but there comes with the designation a responsibility to which the establishment will endeavor to be loyal. After the opening of the season 'our representative comedy,' Sheridan's brilliant and ever popular 'School for Scandal,' introducing in its cast every member of the stock company, there will be produced (the succeeding night) a grand drama of intense interest, being a new version of Victorien Sardou's great play of 'Nos Bons Villagesois,' entitled, 'A Dangerous Game,' the scenic effects of which will be entirely new, quite unique and very beautiful. Its cast will include Miss Clarke, Miss Davenport, Misses Shaw, Temple and Ryan, Messrs. Barron, Warren, Harlow, Wilson, Hudson, Burrows, Nolan, Marion, Maffitt, etc., and the management anticipates that this charming and most effective play will produce an unusual impression upon a public ever ready to recognize sterling merit in a dramatic production. Then will follow a series of the glorious old comedies not produced for three years past, and to those will succeed a number of very attractive novelties, unusual preparations having been made therefore by special engagements with well-known dramatic authors."

There is just another bit from this old souvenir which we cannot resist printing, especially in view of the modern system of transportation, including the happy way of returning home from the theatre in one's own car or in a taxicab. Remember this was thirty-five years ago: "Information may always be obtained at the office and door of the last horse-cars on the different branches of the various roads, and of the last trains on the steam railroads. The cars of every horse-railroad pass the Boston Museum, and arrangements will be made with the respective roads for the providing of ample accommodations at the conclusion of performances."

Boston newspapers carried an account of indignities suffered by the newspaper correspondents attached to the Presidential party at the Cambridge celebration. It appears that a Lieutenant of the 110th Cavalry ordered his men to charge the correspondents with drawn sabres. The contention that he also ordered his men "to shoot the tires off those automobiles" is denied. However, there was much feeling at the time. The newspaper men appealed to Governor Fuller and he ordered the Adjutant General to make an investigation. Acting on the latter's report the Governor has written to the president of the White House Correspondents Association expressing his regret that the incident occurred. We are not prepared to take sides in the matter. Enough attention has been given the matter already. There is, however, a lesson to be learned and one which we trust will be remembered if ever Newton goes in for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of anything. And that lesson is this—policemen are the officials best fitted to perform police duty and militia troops are not. Brilliant as this idea appears it is not original, with us—at least there are those who share it. We can recall a Commander of State troops who said, "Give me 50 policemen and I'll take better care of a crowd than I could with 1,000 soldiers." He meant no reflection on the soldiers, nor do we. A policeman is a professional when it comes to handling crowds and a militia member is an amateur. There is a science in the policing of a great crowd of people. Police specialists, long experienced in the game, plan beforehand where they will have their men. Orders are given to sergeants and sergeants pick-out details of patrolmen. There is a system about it that policemen have learned. When troops are put on duty they are soldiers who are expected to act as policemen. It is asking too much. We understand that the policing of the Cambridge celebration was indeed poor and that several bad tangles occurred. It is not surprising when the crowds are handled by a combination of "cops" and soldiers. There, at the beginning is a mix-up which could and should be avoided.

In these days the medical experts, alert to the health and well-being of every community, keep track of every kind of ailment which they find worthy of study. For their own benefit and for the benefit of the laity they have available all sorts of records. It is an excellent idea, as it helps in many ways to keep us on the path of good living, makes us careful and improves our physical condition. There is one thing—we do not know just how to classify it, and for that reason use the word "thing"—that we have never seen arranged in statistical form. It is what ordinary folks call "homesickness" and what doctors term "nostalgia." Unless we are very much mistaken this is the period when there are more cases of nostalgia than usual. It is Summer and vacation time and consequently the rush "to get away from this old place" is on in earnest. Our sympathy goes out to those who feel that they are happy unless they are "doing something." We believe in a change of scene and a change of environment and all those nice things, but suppose you pick out a place of recreation, settle down there for the Summer and prepare to have a good time—and things go wrong. Wow! Does such an experience come under the head of nostalgia or doesn't it? If one will recall the beautiful story of "Heidi," the little Swiss girl who was taken to Frankfurt for her own good, one may rightfully cite an accurate diagnosis, for Heidi wasn't happy in the city and longed for her native mountains. She became ill and would have died, possibly, had she not been removed to her former home. We wonder if those who are so eager to shake the dust of Newton from their feet are always content in a Summer hotel where conveniences, so inexpensive at home, are charged for at high if not exorbitant rates? If one can travel, yes, but what is the use of merely shifting living places, if one's voyage is to be desired and invariably beneficial, but a jaunt to some spot not so very many miles by land is often disappointing. All this we submit along with the question, "When is nostalgia plain nostalgia and when is it self-pity?" We will be glad to print any physician's reply, providing he does not charge us a consultation fee.

A BREATH OF THE SEA

July 17, 1925.
 Here are some good sea stories for those of us who are not fortunate enough to enjoy the actuality of a continuous summer vacation within sniffing distance of ocean breezes. And you who are in sight and sound of the rolling surf will enjoy them none the less. They include both newer books and older tales which have, nevertheless, remained continuously popular.
 Tide Rips, by Connolly (this author has many other excellent sea stories)
 Nostromo, by Conrad
 Great Sea Stories, edited by French—YF9P88s
 Dark Frigate, by Hawes (Nowberry prize for best children's story of 1923) popular with adults also
 She Blows! And Sparm at That! by Hopkins
 Many Cargoes, by Jacobs
 The Mutineers, by Hawes
 Moby Dick, by Melville
 Comrades of the Rolling Ocean, by Paine
 Captain Blood, by Sabatini
 Somewhere at Sea, and other tales, by Wilson
 The Newton Free Library will also gladly mail you on request a much longer list of sea titles than the above. It includes tales of the whalers, old-fashioned sea novels, salt water poems and short stories, and tales of ocean voyages.

Badger Hunting Novel Sport.

Badgers live in the chalk cliffs of the British Isles and destroy much game while foraging at night. Badger hunting, or digging, is a novel sport, for it entails following the badger into its lair deep in the ground. Extensive galleries with many ramifications are revealed in the chalk cliffs where for thousands of years the animals have been burrowing and excavating the soil.

Harmonica of Glass

One of the most curious musical instruments ever made was the glass harmonica, invented by Benjamin Franklin. It was composed of glass disks of different sizes set on a spindle and made by a treadle to revolve in a trough of water.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, July 15—Members of Congress have made an alarming discovery. There are few, if any vacancies in the government service. This dearth of patronage was revealed this week when many Federal employees journeyed to the Capitol hunting for jobs. The cutting down of certain appropriations at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, released many of the constituents of senators and congressmen.

A rather pathetic spectacle is afforded in the scramble for jobs. There are many members of Congress who will be up for re-election within a few months and are now particularly solicitous about their constituents and the patronage for their particular district. Inasmuch as only one committee which would require clerical assistance will function during the summer, the pressure on the chairman is very strong. This body, the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, will investigate the contest between Senator Brookhart, Republican, of Iowa, and Daniel W. Steck, Democratic candidate for the Senate.

Senator Ernst, Republican, of Kentucky, has adopted a novel scheme to satisfy his senatorial colleagues who are constantly writing him asking him "to take care of" their jobless constituents. The chairman has told all applicants that the one having the largest number of personal endorsements from senators will be considered for the post. The job at its best will pay only a few hundred dollars but in spite of this many are seeking the opening.

The retrenchment policy of the Administration has released many Federal employees from high salaried jobs. It may seem strange to the people at home why these employees discharged from their present duties will take examinations for the same job at an extremely low entrance salary. They make various sacrifices to be retained on the government pay roll rather than return home to teach school or to take up work in the stores, or on the farm. There seems to be a lure about Washington life that makes government employment desirable even if the social sphere is restricted.

One of the reasons that government jobs are regarded by outsiders as "soft snaps" is the policy of allowing 30 days sick leave and 30 days annual leave. This labor policy would bankrupt or lessen the efficiency at least, of private institutions. There is some talk that the present Administration will reduce these two months vacation period taken at the expense of the taxpayers. Two weeks is the ordinary vacation period in private life.

The most harassed individual in the Federal service today is the personnel officer connected with the government departments. He is under pressure from senators and congressmen at the Capitol to find openings for their voters from the home districts. He must be a bold man indeed to stand up against such political pressure because there is always the fear of having revenue taken in December when departmental appropriations are requested of Congress.

The decentralization of certain Government bureaus has also resulted in a demand for transfers from Federal departments in Washington in order to be near their home towns. The Civil Service Commission is not as easily influenced as the departments. They weigh the brain of candidates for Federal jobs while Congressmen estimate only the political calibre.

The publication of a list of senators and congressmen making trips on Government ships during the summer recess has brought out a fine collection of alibis. There is a party of eleven touring the Far East on a government transport. Shortly after this list was made public several of these legislators feared the possible effects in their districts wired an explanation to their home districts saying that they were paying their own expenses and not depending upon the charity of the Federal Government. These junkets are usually expensive to the taxpayers but most entertaining to the travellers.

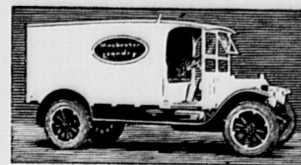

One of the difficulties arising from these unofficial visits of members of Congress is the effect on foreign relations. Many officials of foreign governments are given wrong impressions of this country by indiscreet remarks of their guests. In many instances foreign governments have interpreted the talk on foreign policies by congressmen as semi-official, when as a matter of fact their views carried no weight with the Administration. There is an old story in Washington to the effect that a congressman will talk at the least provocation and that is one of the reasons why the State Department, which wants to maintain the friendliest relations with foreign governments, frowns upon "unofficial misinterpretations" of American opinion.

Another fight is brewing at the Shipping Board as a result of dissension between members of the Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation which is the operating unit for the American Merchant Marine. The controversy centers around the disposition of 200 vessels now owned by the Shipping Board as a result of wartime construction. The dispute may reach a point where the President will recommend the abolition of the board and the transfer of the authorities to the Department of Commerce or some other branch of the service familiar with shipping problems.

Wise Men of Greece.

Solon of Athens is believed to have said "Know thyself." Chilo, the Spartan philosopher, "Remember the end." Thales, of Miletus, "Who hath suretyship is sure." Bias, of Priene, "Most men are bad." Cleobulus, of Lindos, "Avoid extremes." Pittacus, of Mitylene, "Seize time by the forelock." Perander, of Corinth, "Nothing is impossible to industry."

POLICE COURT

It is believed at Police Headquarters, that with the arrest of Alfred S. Ebel of 1026 Chestnut street and Mitchell Ouellette of River avenue, Newton Upper Falls, that the holdups and disturbances at Kendricks Bridge between Newton and Dedham, will cease. This lonely spot has been the scene of several holdups. Paul Nissen of Roxbury, with a companion, John Shields, and two girls, were held up on the bridge, Saturday night. Through the prompt action of motorcycle officers L. O'Donnell and Goddard and patrolman John Sheridan, Ebel and Ouellette were taken into custody. Probable cause was found in Court and they are being held in bonds of $1000, for the Grand Jury on the charge of robbery while armed.

SAFETY FOR CHILDREN

Is your child quick—or dead? One or the other he must be; reckless autoists take the largest toll of child life in the United States. Fathers and mothers, the responsibility rests with you, as well as with the automobile drivers. Here is what you must do to protect your children:

1. Keep your boys and girls off the streets. That means you must not send them on errands across streets or permit them to play where automobiles travel.
2. Warn them daily of the dangers of traffic.
3. Escort the youngest to school, thus personally teaching them the hazards of the streets.

Of 19,000 persons killed by automobiles in the United States in 1924, 5,700 were children. The overwhelming majority of these youngsters were killed while engaged in running errands or going to and from school. Is this slaughter to be stopped? Mothers will have to send their children to the grocery in taxicabs in order to insure their safe return.

EDITORIAL

In order to be as fair as possible on the matter of compulsory automobile insurance, we print this week the reasons advanced by Representative Arthur W. Hollis for opposing this legislation. As a member of the House for five years, it is the impression of the editor that the residents of Newton are in favor of this kind of legislation, and that opinion was shared by his colleagues both in the House and Senate. Mr. Hollis, in his first year, either does not have that opinion, or believes that he is better posted on this subject than either his colleagues or his constituency. Mr. Hollis' first argument is that the new law does not prevent accidents, and that it will actually increase them. We have a law against murder, but it does not prevent men from killing one another, and the insurance law will not prevent accidents, except by keeping off the roads the cheaper and irresponsible classes who now are largely responsible for most of the present day accidents. We do not believe that just because a motorist is insured he will deliberately run down a child or any other person, and that if he is not insured he would proceed more carefully. The average motorist is a human being, and does not desire accidents whether insured or not insured.

Mr. Hollis' claim that the careful driver would be obliged to buy something he doesn't need, is offset by the fact that the careful driver is usually the man who carries insurance, and he would welcome a law that would require every other driver to do the same, and thus give him some remedy in case of accident.

If Mr. Hollis' contention that it is a national and not a state matter is true, why not give to the federal government all control over automobile legislation. Massachusetts surely has the necessary authority to say what class of vehicles and drivers shall use its highways.

The real truth is that Mr. Hollis and the insurance lobby and interests which he so ably defends, oppose the law largely because it gives the Insurance Commissioner the power to fix the rates to be paid for this class of insurance. The insurance business would far rather have one third of the automobiles insured as at present, at rates established by themselves than have 100 percent of the machines insured at rates prescribed by the Insurance Commissioner. Here is the "nigger in the woodpile" of the opposition to this law.

To the man in the street, the present agitation regarding evolution now taking place at Dayton, Tennessee, is clearly out of place. The court now hearing the case, will undoubtedly find the defendant guilty of violating the laws of the state of Tennessee. Any other conclusion is unthinkable. The constitutionality of the law is another matter entirely, and should be argued before the Supreme Court of Tennessee or the Supreme Court at Washington, and not before the local or district court.

We sympathize with the good people of Tennessee in this unpleasant notoriety which has come to them, as Massachusetts has a law or two on the books which might be questioned in a similar manner. Suppose some teacher, paid from public funds, refused to comply with Section 31, chapter 71 of the General Statutes which states that "A portion of the Bible shall be read daily in the public schools," or allow some one to violate section 33 of the same chapter, which states "No person shall, in the presence of a pupil in any public school, practice vivisection." How would we in such instances like to have the notoriety seeking gentlemen (?) from other states come here to tell us what we shall or shall not do.

We earnestly hope that the judge and jury at Dayton will duly and properly convict the defendant in this case of a clear violation of Tennessee law and not allow the mouthings of Bryan, Darrow and others to becloud the real issue, which is,—shall Tennessee govern itself.

Mr. John Flood, who will celebrate his eightieth birthday next Sunday, is one of the most useful residents of our city. For over fifty years Mr. Flood has cheerfully undertaken and has ably performed many public spirited duties, and well deserves the esteem and honor in which he is held by his many friends.

An acting librarian, while the trustees are seeking a proper person for that office is commendable. An acting Overseer of the Poor, with the Mayor doing nothing to fill the office permanently is a horse of another color.

cramped the big structure, and the adjoining church had to be bought and used. The dream of a $500-a-week business was swallowed up years ago. One time when the $500,000-a-year mark had been passed, Mr. Downer asked what his next mark was.

"Is it a million dollars-a-year?" He only smiled and said, "The answer to that question is up to the organization."

Not content with rendering laundry service in one place, Mr. Downer established a plant in Lowell in 1918. In 1920, in the midst of the depression, he bought a plant in Waltham, which is now to occupy the new plant at Newton.

No attempt will be made in this short article to tell in detail the story of the development of the business. As the organization, sometimes led and sometimes driven, rendered better service, more customers came. The more service rendered, the greater the demand for that service.

As in obedience to natural law, so does business turn naturally to the place where it is welcomed and where it is treated hospitably. In his personal life Arthur Downer is the most hospitable of men. His business is only a visible manifestation of the spirit that animates him.

Alone of course he could have done little. At his side from the very beginning and during all the darkest days that followed stood the conservative, dependable, trustworthy, loyal associate, John G. Perry, the president of the company. His part was not to play in the glare of the spotlight, but to remain quietly in the wings, where he rendered services the value of which cannot be over-estimated.

Supporting these two leaders were men and women who felt the spirit of the leaders and showed by the work they did how eager they were to make the dream of an ideal laundry come true. The private soldiers did their share when they carried out the commands of their officers. To them, too, must the present-day members of the organization pay tribute.

Mr. Downer believes that a properly conducted laundry, dedicated to the ideal of cleanliness, is an institution worthy of the best it can receive from men and women. Possibly no business renders a more intimate service unless it be a restaurant. Its work is highly individualized and intimately personal. Insofar as it renders a service, it is fit to take its place with schools and churches. All useful work is holy work. The highest ideals of service are none too high for a business whose leaders want it to grow and serve through the years.

To render a laundry service that will free homes from much drudgery and liberate women for work which will result in creating greater happiness for themselves and the members of their households is one of the dominating purposes of the Winchester Laundries under the leadership of Arthur T. Downer.

more men in the enlisted reserves in time of peace. Effort is made each year to have the personnel of the Organized Reserves keep in touch with the latest military instructional methods.

For this purpose Congress appropriates a small sum of money which enables the President to call for duty, for a period not to exceed 15 days without the consent of the reserve officer concerned, a small number of the reserve officers each year. In the instruction work the effort is to emphasize the "elements of command" and have the officers themselves carry on the work under the direction and tutelage of the regular officers assigned for the purpose. This accounts then for egress yearly of a certain number of our citizens each year to camps of instruction.

The National Guard carry on all the time. They are a State force and the Governor of the state is the Commander-in-chief, until such time as the United States needs them. In certain cases they can be called for duty by the President, but for the general service of the United States for duty anywhere in time of war the authority of Congress is necessary. In order that their training and equipment may be uniform throughout the country, the Federal Government arms, equips, and supervises the training and pays the troops.

So we find in Newton at the present time, about 15 officers of the Regular Army residing while on the various duties of the army in this community. A National guard company drilling every week at the armory and 15 days encampment at Camp Devens. This is Co. C 101st Infantry.

About 60 reserve officers belonging to various units of the reserves allocated to this Corps area and the following units:

1. Collecting Co. 402 (a Medical Unit.)

2. Hq. and Hq. Detach. 601 (Art. R. R.)

3. Troop C 158 (Mach. Gun Sq. Cav.)

4. Co. D 302 (Infantry.)

5. Co. B 41th (Engineers.)

A total of 824 men to come from this city in the first part of any war in which the services of the organized reserves might be required.

The officers of the above organization are already assigned and they are preparing themselves each year to properly lead any men assigned them.

The defense test this year shows an advance over that of last year in that we now know just what companies belong to our community, and that we have the commissioned personnel for them.

It is necessary to have these yearly tests in order to let our people know just where we stand on organization, and to present to our public the nuclei we actually have.

NEWTON HOSPITAL

Week ending July 11:—Patients in hospital 119, patients paying as much as cost of care or more 51, patients paying less than cost of care 33, free patients, including babies, 35, babies born 16, patients treated by out-patient department 86, accident cases 7, social service calls at hospital 12, social service calls at home 12, patients transferred by social service car 2.

Summer is supposed to be the dull season at the hospital but at present Founders is overcrowded. There are extra beds set up in both reception rooms and on the third floor. Founders, as most know, is where the maternity ward is located. There has been also an extra demand for surgical dressings, so that one of the nurses has had to be tolled off to work at the making of them in the surgical dressings room. It was to guard against such a demand for surgical dressings that week after week during the past winter the hospital asked for volunteer workers to help make up a supply which would last through the summer. There were volunteers who responded and who worked faithfully, but there were not enough of them to make up the supply it was hoped to secure. Perhaps as time goes on and more women realize the hospital's real need for help in dressing making and the having on hand at all times of a plentiful supply of dressings there will be more who will volunteer.

Miss Allen, the superintendent, is now on a vacation at her home in Sedwick, Me., and during her absence Miss Humphrys will be the acting superintendent. Miss Russell of the surgical department is on a vacation at Grand Menan, and Miss Houston of Founders is at Augusta, Me.

Most of the recent accident cases have been fractures, arms, shoulders and wrists.

This being vacation time in the schools there are a number of tonsil removal cases in the surgical department.

There was no session of the eye clinic last week.

EDITOR HAS MANY TROUBLES

Among Them is the Necessity of Living Up to a Reputation for Limitless Knowledge.

The troubles of an editor in a small town are many. Besides the difficulty inherent in making up his paper satisfactorily, he often has to live up to a reputation for limitless knowledge. For many persons he is an oracle, and the column headed "Notes and Queries," or something similar, is his mouthpiece. A western paper received a communication bearing pertinently on this matter. It ran as follows:

"Dear Editor: Will you kindly inform me by return mail what number of seeds are contained in a 73 to 75-pound pumpkin, as I wish to settle an argument."

A parallel to this request lies in an unhappy experience of an editor who one morning received two letters from subscribers. The first, an anxious father, wrote to find out the best way to bring up his twin babies in health and happiness, while the other, a farmer, wanted to know the quickest method of getting rid of grasshoppers.

The editor hesitated; then out of the fullness of his knowledge, he wrote two letters in reply. But in the haste of business he put the letters into the wrong envelopes.

The next morning the father of the twins received this interesting answer:

"Cover them carefully with straw and set fire to it. After jumping in the flames a few moments the little pests will speedily be done for."

And the man who was troubled with grasshoppers was bidden to "Give castor-oil regularly in moderate doses and rub their gums with a bone."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

LOCATED THE GUILTY PARTY

Irate Passenger Discovered Why Pullman Porter Was Unable to Hear Sleep Disturber.

The Panama Limited was speeding on its way and most of the passengers peacefully slumbering. Suddenly above the click of the rails rose the sonorous sound of a prolonged snore.

Occupant of berth No. 8 moved restlessly.

The snore seemed to generate volume as it continued.

There was an impatient move in berth No. 8, and a bell buzzed angrily.

From the rear a porter hurried to berth No. 8.

An irate masculine voice exclaimed: "Porter, tell that snoring person to shut up. I can't sleep with all that racket."

The porter listened respectfully.

"I don't hear no snoring, boss, but I'll listen."

The porter retired to the rear of the car. After a few moments of silence, again there rose that resonant snore, more voluminous, more defiant, more prolonged.

Passenger in berth No. 3 trembled with indignation. He, hastily donning his dressing gown, he rose and stealthily crept down the aisle, determined to locate the midnight disturber. He quickened his pace and confronted the porter seated on a camp stool, mouth agape, contentedly snoring.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Lucky Gold Strikes.

A Sonora (Calif.) man, taking an early stroll one Sunday morning in 1851, accidentally stubbed his toe with great violence against a large stone. In his wrath and pain he was apostrophizing the stone in language not at all appropriate to the Sabbath, when he noticed on the spot bruised by the impact of his boot the familiar and ever-welcome gleam of yellow. His flow of profanity came to an abrupt stop. He picked up the stone and carried it home affectionately in his arms. It brought him several thousand dollars.

Another Sonora man, driving a mule cart along the principal street of the town one morning after a rainstorm, had the good fortune to observe a golden streak left by the passage of the wheel through the mud. Stooping, he found a solid gold nugget weighing about 35 pounds. Thousands had passed over the same spot, but the luck was with him.

Reflected Energy.

W. W. Coblenz and C. O. Laupland have made a number of measurements of the ratio of reflected energy to the energy re-radiated after being absorbed. This latter energy is of much longer wave-length than the former and is entirely absorbed by placing a thin cell of water in the path of the light from the planet. The measurements were made by means of a delicate thermocouple capable of detecting the heat from a tallow candle at a distance of many miles. The ratio of the measurements made with and without the water cell is called the water cell transmission and denotes the ratio of the reflected energy to the whole.

When Flag Should Be Flown

The flag should be flown on Lincoln's birthday, February 12; Washington's birthday, February 22; Mother's day, second Sunday in May; Memorial day, May 30; Flag day, June 14; Independence day, July 4; Armistice day, November 11, and also on many local patriotic anniversaries. On these days the flag should be hoisted at full mast, except on Memorial day, when it should be at half-mast until noon, then raised to the top of the staff, where it remains until sunset. Before placing the flag at half-mast, it must be hoisted to the top of the pole or staff and then lowered to half-mast.

FOUGHT OVER THE TROUSERS

African Natives Willing to Go to Any Length for the Honor of Wearing Them.

In Swaziland trousers make a world of difference. Sibijuan, the intimate boyhood companion of Mr. Owen R. O'Neil, author of "Adventures in Swaziland," instantly lost caste when his white friend donned his first pair of corduroys. The circumstance hurt poor Sibijuan, and he was quick to make this proposal:

"Klein Baas" (meaning "little boss"), he said with pathetic earnestness, "you have been wearing the trousers all day. Don't you think it is my turn to wear them? We are both indunas (leaders) of our impi; it is not right that one should be better than the other. Let me wear the trousers until sundown and show our men that we are brothers-in-arms!"

The proposal seemed reasonable to me. Sibijuan and I had shared our joys and woes for several years, and there was no reason for my refusing him the honor of wearing the wonderful trousers. We changed; I put on his beads, and he got into my corduroys. Then came a perfect exhibition of the Kafir temperament. Sibijuan became insufferably arrogant; he gave orders to our impi, and for a moment I thought he was going to try to command me. The more he lorded it over the others the more sullen and angered they became.

Of course the inevitable happened; there was a fight between Sibijuan and the other Kaffirs for the possession of the corduroys. Death or wounds were little things compared with the loss of those trousers! When the fight was over I had been stabbed in the eye with an assegai, but I had the trousers!

NO OCCASION FOR HEROICS

Rescue Work Really a Matter of Little Moment, According to the Chief Participant.

Companying accounts of a flood in a distant city, the local paper of an inland town blazed headlines across its front page painting scenes of heroic rescue work by an erstwhile inhabitant.

This prodigal some years previous had quit his post on the corner curbstone and journeyed to the outside world in quest of opportunity. The predictions for a "good end" attended him. Thereafter an occasional rumor drifted homeward, but that was all. His place was taken, his jokes repeated and the town resumed its routine.

Then the flood—and he was reported to have revealed qualities they had little suspected. Three letters of inquiry were sent, finally a telegram. They wished to know what he did, how he felt, what he said, what the mayor said.—In short, they wanted an opportunity to worship the current hero.

At last came his modest reply. "There has been undue credit given me for heroic rescue work. I am supposed to have been instrumental in assisting fair maidens from the flooded streets. To be truthful, I hauled out three, but they were so small I threw them all back in again."—Kansas City Star.

First Find of California Gold.

The first nugget found by Marshall, the discoverer of gold in California, was worth but 50 cents, and the second brought $5. The first big nugget was found shortly afterward by a soldier of Stevenson's regiment in a little stream as he was leaning over to take a drink. It weighed between 20 and 25 pounds.

A much more valuable nugget was found by four miners, who were so wary that in bringing it to San Francisco, where it was placed on exhibition, one of them was always on guard, night and day. It was such a magnificent specimen that it was taken to the eastern states for exhibition. There the owners quarreled, became involved in litigations with one another and lawyers got the entire proceeds.—John L. Considine in Adventure Magazine.

American Invented Jinrikisha.

Jonathan Goble, the inventor of the jinrikisha, was a self-respecting American marine in the American naval service under Commodore Perry in 1852-54. Going as a pioneer Christian missionary to Japan in 1860, he was left stranded without salary or support when the Civil war broke out. So in self-support and to give assistance to a wife in poor health, he first taught the Japanese to make leather shoes—a veritable St. Crispin in a land of wooden clogs and rice straw sandals.

Then from Godey's Lady Book he showed the picture of a perambulator, and helped a native blacksmith and wheelwright to make a man-power carriage, in contrast to a ba-sha, horse power, and a jokusha, steam power wheeled vehicle.

Gem Found in North Carolina.

Aquamarine, another member of the beryl family and one that is growing in popularity because of its exquisite coloring, is found in North Carolina, as the collection at the National museum shows. Connecticut, Maine and Massachusetts all have aquamarines, but whether or not in paying quantities has not yet been decided. Some of the aquamarines from these states in the Isaac Lea collection rival in beauty their sister stones from Brazil and Ceylon. "Pink" and "golden" beryls, such as one thinks could be found nowhere in a state of nature outside of Brazil or Russia, are produced in Connecticut, Maine and other parts of New England.

NEWTON, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 24, 1925.

TERMS, $3.00 A YEAR

31st ANNIVERSARY

Garden City Lodge, No. 182, of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, observed its 31st anniversary Tuesday evening, at Bay State Hall, Newton, with an enjoyable program of speaking, entertainment and dancing. Grand Master Workman, Charles Canning being the chief speaker.

The entertainment was given by Miss L. Lundy, piano solo; Miss Mary Whalen, violin solo; Miss L. Lundy and Joseph Doucette, vocal solos.

John F. Griffin, treasurer for 31 years, presented John Flood, who was 80 years old last Saturday, with a pair of gold cuff links, on behalf of the lodge.

Delegations were present from Vulcan, Howard, Waltham, Watch City, Unity and Gen. Hull Lodges.

A buffet lunch was served by Mrs. Florence Kelly, Mrs. M. McTague, Charles Pendergast, Mrs. Andrew Carlin, Mrs. M. Gibson, John Kelly, J. Murphy, Thomas Carr and Amos Landry.

Garden City Lodge was formed by George F. Higgins of Rhode Island, July 27, 1894. Its first officers were: Myles J. Joyce, Past Master Workman; John Flood, Master Workman; John E. Breston, Financier; Corn H. Keefe, Overseer; Peter R. Mullen, Recorder; William J. Dunn, Foreman; John J. Griffin, Treasurer; Charles H. McAleer, Guide; John Murphy, Inside Watch; Thomas F. Kelley, Outside Watch.

In its history, 33 deaths, calling for $52,537, in claims have taken place. Today the A. O. U. W. is 102 per cent solvent based upon its new policy of regular insurance and issues policies from $500 to $10,000 in size. A Juvenile Department is being formed which augurs well for the future.

PLUMBERS STRIKE

The strike of men engaged in the plumbing and heating business in the district of which Newton is a part, and embracing Waltham, Watertown, Concord and Needham, which began last Saturday, has been settled and the men will return to work next Monday with an increase of wages from $1.10 to $1.25 per hour, to run for two years. The union also won its contention that the Master Plumbers must sign the agreement individually instead of as an association as in the past.

After all what reason has Mr. Bryan to believe in the survival of the fittest?—Edward Hope in New York Herald Tribune.

Y. M. C. A.

On Wednesday, July 22nd, the third group of forty boys sent out from Boston by the City Mission Society, were entertained at the Newton Y. M. C. A. The entire group were attending the Phillips Church, South Boston. After games on the athletic field and a refreshing swim in the pool, the boys were then given all they could eat of a fine luncheon of sandwiches, plenty of milk, ice cream, and fancy cakes. A sing followed the luncheon, and less strenuous games were played in the assembly hall. The program was completed by another swim after which the boys left for home with the missionaries who were in charge of them.

For a number of years the Newton Y. M. C. A. has been entertaining these Boston boys each week during the warm summer months, and those who so kindly contribute toward this special phase of Association work would be much gratified to see the happy faces of the boys and realize how they look forward to their outings.

Mr. George E. Morris, Physical Director of the Association is recovering from an operation for appendicitis at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Brookline. Reports are that he is doing well.

Boys leaving for the Frank A. Day Camp, East Brookfield, on Friday, July 24th, are: M. Tobey, R. Parker, E. Rogers, E. Ashton, E. Parkin, H. McKinney, Charles Smith, E. Keeler, W. Marlon, E. LaCrosse, Glendenn Smith, P. Jameson, R. Bell, W. Pickersgill, F. Wood, N. Harris, W. Quigley, R. Smith, H. Hill. There will be a camp circus on Saturday, July 25th. These boys will be at camp in time to enjoy this circus which is an annual event. Friends and parents of campers, and all interested in Camp Day, are cordially invited to attend.

Thursday afternoon at 1.30, Fred Becker, manager of the Boys' Division baseball team attended a meeting in Boston, regarding entering the local "Y" team in the Knot Hole League that is to be held at Braves Field. There is to be a short elimination league of all the teams that enter. The two best teams of this league will play a series of games at Braves Field in conjunction with one of the National League games. Newton "Y" is hoping to have this honor. Manager Becker is doing all in his power to make this possible. Henry Pambookian is captain of the "Y" outfit.

To date the "Y" junior team have played seventeen games, winning eight, losing eight, and one tie. This is (Continued on Page 2)

BOY SCOUTS

The following scouts from Norumbega Council are at Loon Pond Camp, the Greater Boston Boy Scout Camp at Lakeville, Mass., near Middleboro: Brandt, Burnell, Wayland and Stearns of troop 7, West Newton; Robbins of troop 1, Newtonville; Jordan and Adams of troop 11, Scout Nally of troop 11 goes Saturday. Loon Pond Camp is in an ideal location and is very well conducted. The opportunity for swimming and games is particularly good and the scouts are certainly enjoying themselves as well as progressing in their scout requirements.

Troop 1 of Newtonville is being reorganized with Mr. Douglas Sloane as scoutmaster assisted by Messrs. Arthur Quimby and Richards W. Cotton. Mr. Cotton has been scoutmaster for some time but his business now demands so much of his time that he is unable to carry along the work as scoutmaster. The troop committee, composed of Mr. John H. Eddy, Chairman, Messrs. C. J. McDavitt and James A. Stafford, has added Dr. A. M. Ellis and it is understood there are two more members to be elected. Samuel Moore, at present Senior Patrol Leader, will soon reach the age that makes him eligible for an Assistant's commission and will be promoted to that post. Under this efficient leadership troop 1 will be a real factor in the work of Norumbega Council the coming year.

Arrangements are being made for starting a Seascout "ship" this fall, probably one crew making their headquarters at Newton and the other at Newton Upper Falls in order to get the use of the Charles at the best points.

CITY HALL

Street Commissioner Stuart reports that the following bids have been received for Laundry Brook improvement, between Walnut Street and Clarendon Street.

A. Daddario, Mattapan, $8,610.00; Mark E. Kelly Co. Inc., Peabody, $9,715.95; D. B. Hill, Newton, $12,106.50; DeCristofaro Bros. Co., Roslindale, 12,277.50; Frank McCarthy, Newton, 13,173.00; Thomas Mulcare, Cambridge, 13,299.00; James A. Chesaron, N. Upper Falls, $16,305.00; Engineering Service & Const. Co. Boston, $17,986.80; A. Baruffaldi, Somerville, $20,107.50; The Rendle Corp., Chelsea, $21,018.75; W. B. Byrne, West Medford, $21,416.25; John E. Palmer Co., Boston, $22,245.00.

After the city government make the appropriation the contract will be awarded to A. Daddario, the lowest bidder.

SUMMER BIBLE SCHOOL

Friday morning of this week the Summer Bible School which has been held in the Newtonville Episcopal Church held its last session at which time the parents and friends of the boys and girls were present. The program consisted of music, stories and material which the boys and girls had learned during the three weeks the school has been in session. Certificates were presented to 53 boys and girls who had attended at least ten days of the fifteen. Special recognition was given to those who had met the requirements of memory work, those who had completed their hand work satisfactory and to those who had made a perfect record of attendance. 43 of the group were present every day.

The 72 enrolled represented 6 different denominations. Over 90 per cent of the active enrollment were present every day. The average attendance by weeks follows: first week, 56; second week 52; third week 54.

The school held its picnic on Thursday afternoon in Cabot Woods. The picnic was carried out as a part of the recreational program in connection with the school. The central aim of the school was the development of Christian character. At the heart of the daily program was the instruction period at which time some vital truth was presented by story or discussion. The hand work was definitely connected with the lesson of the day.

As much time was given for religious instruction in the three weeks as are given in the average Church School during the entire year. That the boys and girls were interested in the program is attested to by the attendance from day to day. The school has exceeded the expectations of those who planned it. It promises to be a regular part of the program of religious education for Newtonville. With the splendid beginning made this year the school next year should be of a very high standard.

Similar schools are being held in Watertown, Waltham and Newton Centre this summer.

WOMAN INJURED

Mrs. Frances Davis, aged 63, of 167 Lake avenue, Newton Highlands, is on the dangerous list at the Newton Hospital. She was found unconscious last night on Walnut street, Newton Highlands, apparently having been run down by an automobile. Patrolmen JenRins and Sheridan gave first aid.

MR. JEWETT DEAD

Friends of Mr. Asa C. Jewett of Newton Centre were stunned yesterday morning on the receipt of a telegram stating that Mr. Jewett had passed away that morning at Glacier National Park, Montana. Mr. Jewett was with a party of Knights Templars who were on their way to Portland, Oregon to attend the triennial convocation of Knight Templars of the United States.

Mr. Jewett was one of the best known members of the Masonic fraternity in this part of the country, being a member of all the Masonic bodies and holding the high position of Grand Commander of Knight Templars of Massachusetts and Rhode Island to which he was elected last year. Mr. Jewett was recorder of Gethsemane Commandery of this city for over thirty years, relinquishing that office only for the term of Emeritus Commander. He was also a member of the Newton Rotary Club and of the Newton Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Jewett was born in Pepperell, Mass., sixty years ago but has made his home in this city for over forty years. He was twice married, and is survived by his widow, Elizabeth.

He was for many years in the decorating business on Union street. (Continued on Page 4)

MR. FLOOD HONORED

A splendid tribute of affection and esteem was paid to Mr. John Flood, last Sunday afternoon and evening, at the observance of his eightieth birthday. About five hundred friends and neighbors called at his home on Washington street during the afternoon and evening, filled his house with flowers and left many gifts including a handsome diamond insignia ring bearing the emblem of the Order of Elks and of the Grand Army of the Republic. This gift was from Newton Lodge of Elks. Mr. Flood also received many baskets of flowers, including eighty roses from Newton Lodge of Elks, eighty carnations from his grandchildren, eighty carnations from the Past Dept. Presidents' Association, Daughters of Veterans, and eighty carnations from the Kearsage Association Naval Veterans' Auxiliary.

During the afternoon there was vocal and instrumental music by the Misses Helen and Esther Comiskey of Wellesley, Mrs. George P. Flood and Mr. James C. Doherty and family. In the evening there was music by Mr. Joseph Antoinelli, Miss Edna Pattee of Cambridge and by Mr. Doherty and family.

Mr. Flood was assisted in receiving his friends by his daughter, Miss Katherine R. A. Flood and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. George P. Flood. Mrs. John Glancy was in charge of the guest book and Mrs. Eda Doherty and the Misses Sadie and Mae Doherty, Julia and Helen Burke and Mary Boudrout assisted with refreshments.

Among the prominent guests were Mayor Edwin O. Childs, National Senior Vice Commander of the G. A. R. Wilfred A. Wetherbee; department president of the Daughters of Veterans, Mrs. Helen Phinney and department junior vice president, W. R. C., Miss Emily Corey. Delegations were present from Charles Ward Post, G. A. R.; Newton Lodge of Elks, Newton Council, K. of C.; Middlesex Court, M. C. O. F.; the A. O. U. W., Royal Arcanum; Sons and Daughters of Nan-tucket, Massachusetts Undertakers' Association and the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Flood was born in Nantucket, came here in 1869 and has been in the undertaking business here since 1880.

NEWTON HOSPITAL

Week ending July 18. Patients in hospital 118, patients paying as much as cost of care or more 50, patients paying less than cost of care 32, free patients, including babies, 36, babies born 13, patients treated by out patient department 104, patients treated by eye clinic 5, accident cases 26, social service calls at hospital 8, at homes 4.

Founders is still crowded, every room and every available bed taken so crowded in fact that one day last week, a maternity case had to be cared for in the main hospital.

Among the cases treated last week, were several cases of dog bites, none of them serious. One case was that of a young man from Natick, who is a clerk in one of the stores there. A woman came into the store where he was employed bringing with her a police dog on a leash. The dog saw a smaller dog in the store and started for it and the woman being unable to manage him the clerk went to her aid and was bitten on the hand and knee.

The contagious ward is now empty and little Sabina one of the scarlet fever patients who came from the Peabody home for Crippled Children has returned to the Home. Because of after effects of the fever she was an inmate of the contagious ward for many months and became a great favorite of all the nurses who met her. With the nurse in charge of the ward she walked about the grounds within the quarantine limits and though only about four, learned the names of many trees and many birds.

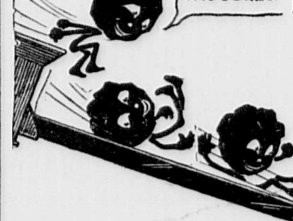

The hospital has had several gifts of flowers recently for distribution among the patients.

Of last week's accidents eight were treated on Friday.

Two remarks made by visitors to the hospital lately. The first by a member of the family of one who was sent there for an emergency appendicitis operation. "We Newton people do not think much about the hospital when things go along as usual but when trouble comes we have to wonder what we'd do if we didn't have it." The second by a visitor who knows something about hospital needs: "Your hospital operating suite is altogether too small for the work you are called upon to do. You ought to have at least two more operating rooms and an accident receiving room."

WHEN WE SHOOT-THE- SHOOT INTO YOUR CELLAR, YOU CAN SAY GOOD-BYE TO COLD AND FURNACE TROUBLES

HERE is a merry sight to behold. Someone is laying in a stock of heat and good cheer. The coal boys are never so joyous as when they enter a happy household. They are the life of the furnace. They lighten the work of tending fires. They go about their job without fuss or dust and see to it that you get heat with the minimum of ash.

CRIMINALS PUT UNDER WATER

Capital Punishment by Drowning Was a Common Method of Procedure for Many Centuries.

Drowning was long a method of capital punishment. Tacitus says that the Germans hanged their greater criminals, but the meaner and more infamous offenders were plunged under hurdles in the bogs and fens. Drowning was also a Roman punishment. The Lex Cornelia decreed that parricides should be sewn in a sack with a dog, cock, viper and ape and thrown into the sea. The Anglo-Saxon codes condemned women thieves to be drowned.

In Scotland in 1556 a man convicted of theft and sacrilege was sentenced to be drowned, by the "queen's special grace." As late as 1611 a man was drowned at Edinburgh for stealing a lamb. In 1623 11 gypsy women were sentenced to be drowned in the Edinburgh Nor' Loch. By that time the punishment by drowning had become obsolete in England. It survived in Scotland until 1685 (the year of the drowning of Wigtown martyrs), and in France was employed as late as 1793.

IN PLACE OF ENCHANTMENT

That evening was the evening of the full moon. The garden was an enchanted place where all the flowers seemed white. The lilies, the daphnes, the orange blossom, the white stocks, the white pinks, the white roses—you could see these as plainly as in the daytime; but the colored flowers existed only as fragrance.

The three younger women sat on the low wall at the end of the top garden after dinner. Rose a little apart from the others, watched the enormous moon moving slowly over the place where Shelley had lived. . . . Just a hundred years before. The sea quivered along the path of the moon. The stars winked and trembled. The mountains were misty blue outlines, with little clusters of lights shining through from little clusters of homes. In the gardens the plants stood quite still, straight and unstirred by the smallest ruffle of air.—From "The Enchanted April."

Why She Didn't Want Tea.

"No, thanks," said the girl emphatically, "no tea."

"Why not?" inquired her escort.

"No, I think I'll make it hot chocolate today."

"What's happened? I thought your cup of tea every afternoon was one of the necessities of life. What made you give it up? Are you getting too nervous; did the doctor advise you to stop it? Haven't they got the brand you like here?"

All the time they were at the table she kept them in suspense and then, when the last cookie had been eaten and his store of persuasive adjectives had been exhausted she said:

"Well, now that they put the tea in those little old bags there are never any leaves in the bottom of the cup to tell your fortune with, and that's what I liked about tea."

Diamonds in United States.

Rock formations showing "favorable structures" for diamonds, and a few diamond crystals here and there have been found in North Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky, Ohio, Wisconsin and Colorado. In the Isaac Lea collection there is a yellow stone, uncut, but highly polished, picked up at Cabin Fork creek in Kentucky. Whether this stone was produced in Kentucky, or was picked up by a bird in a neighboring state and casually dropped over Cabin Fork creek it would be hard to say, but it was surely produced somewhere not far from where it was found, and the National museum catalogues it as coming from Kentucky. As long ago as 1856 a diamond weighing eleven and a half carats (about 45 grains, diamond weight) was found at Manchester, near Richmond, Va.

Record Gold Nuggets.

The largest gold nugget ever found came from Chile, weighed more than 400 pounds Troy, and was worth nearly $100,000. The second largest, weighing 224 pounds, was mined in Ballarat, Australia, in 1859. The third largest was picked up at Carson Hill, Calaveras county, Calif., in 1854. It was a lump about 15 inches long, 6 wide and 4 thick, weighed 195 pounds Troy, and brought more than $43,000.

French Ravine, Sierra county, Calif., was a perfect nest of big nuggets. A $5,000 one was found there in 1850, an $8,000 one in 1851 and a $10,000 one in 1855—thus proving that in mining lightning sometimes does strike more than once in the same place.

Book of Jasher Lost.

The Book of Jasher is a lost Hebrew book, twice quoted in the Old Testament (Joshua 10:13, II Samuel 1:17, 18). Its author and contents are both unknown, and have given rise to much speculation. According to many scholars, the book perished during the captivity of the Jews in Babylon (606-536 B. C.). As the word Jasher means just or upright, the book is generally thought to have been a history of just men.

Two rabbinical works under the name Book of Jasher are extant, one written in 1394 A. D. by R. Shabbatai Cramuz Levita, the other by R. Thum, printed in 1544. An anonymous work was also printed in 1925 at Venice and Prague.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

Early Sunday morning there was a bad accident at the corner of Commonwealth avenue and Walnut street, Newtonville, when a Ford truck owned and operated by William J. Fellen of Cambridge while travelling west on the avenue collided with a Ford sedan owned and operated by M. T. O'Meara of Needham, which was travelling south on Walnut street. Robert J. Wiseman, Jr., of Cambridge, who was on the truck was injured on the right foot and Harry R. Dolan, who was also on the truck, claimed to be injured as well. These two men and the driver were arrested for drunkenness. On Saturday afternoon Frank Gillitino had his right leg badly crushed while working for T. Stuart & Sons Co. in laying the new gas main on Washington street, near Commonwealth avenue, Auburndale. Gillitino after helping load a truck with stone, jumped on the load and allowed his legs to hang over the side in such a manner that they were caught between the truck and a tree. He was taken to the Newton Hospital in the Police ambulance.

Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock, while there was quite a gathering of persons on Adams street, Arthur P. Gallant drove a Hudson sedan thru the crowd injuring Giduc Bianchi and Dan Cordarelli about the legs.

SURPRISE PARTY AND SHOWER

Some of the young friends of Miss Olive Beal, who announced her engagement recently, gave her a delightful surprise and shower last Friday evening, at the home of Miss Marjorie P. Perkins at 18 Eddy street, West Newton.

Miss Perkins invited Miss Beal to supper and later on in dropped a jolly crowd of girls with packages galore, and a delightful time was spent watching Miss Beal open her bundles, and listening to the varied messages attached, which she was obliged to read for the enjoyment of all.

Later in the evening refreshments of ice cream and cake were served, after which the time was spent in singing.

When Miss Beal departed for home it took a good sized automobile and much assistance to look after her many additions to her already full hope chest, and all wished her much joy for the future.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S ANCESTORS

Interesting Stories of Early Watertown Settlers by the Historian of the Coolidge Family

Some stories of these people, and of early Watertown told by the Historian of the Coolidge Family, and its genealogical Secretary, Emma Downing Coolidge, author of "At the King's Pleasure, The Dreamer, and other stories."

A few weeks ago at least one citizen of Massachusetts received a thrill upon the visit of the President to the old burying ground on Arlington Street, Watertown. The railroad crossing, tender, whose fate it was to have to lower the gates just as the White House car dashed up to the railroad crossing—however rude such a reception seemed—viewed with popping eyes the insignia on the car which identified its distinguished occupant. We are told by news reporters, whose dramatic instinct is supremely developed, that he shivered wildly to members of his family, to doubting wife, and dazed children, that it was the President! But, reading how Calvin Coolidge stood before the two sturdy, oblong stones that mark the graves of the first of the Coolidge clan in America, within sight of the acres upon which dwelt for generations, his ancestors, there was a thrill for me that surpassed even that of the cross-tender. My mind flew back to a May day of 1918, when Calvin Coolidge was Lieutenant Governor for Massachusetts, and when, in my first real talk with him, I discovered, to my amazement, that he did not know that he—in common with all other Coolidges in America—was descended from John Coolidge who came to Watertown in 1630. Brought up as I had been from childhood on traditions of the family I could not believe that this man, who was himself carrying forward the political inheritance of his forebears, was unaware as to why he had felt the urge to public life. To be sure, his father and his grandfather, and great-grandfather before him, had held office in Vermont, but this was not until 1789, when the first Coolidge to leave Massachusetts for Vermont, became Selectman in the town of Saltash—now Plymouth—which he had helped to clear from a wilderness in 1781. And that was a hundred and fifty years after every other branch of the family had been holding the chief offices in every town in which they dwelt! So that even in that dormancy the inheritance for public life had not died, but merely waited for the proper time to reassert itself.

Had these same dramatically inclined reporters known, as some of us do, the history of those early Watertown days—which should be of especial interest to Newton folk, since it brings so close to us the written destinies of family ties of one who today holds the highest office in the power of the citizens of the United States to bestow—they would have seen in that moment when Calvin Coolidge stood before those stones over the graves of the first of the Coolidge name in this land, and looked out, possibly unseeing, upon the farm and homestead of a descendant of this same man, a moment of greater drama than even in the excitement of the cross-tender! For this John Coolidge, whose grave he was visiting in loyal sentiment of what the past had bestowed, had started the political career of all these descendants by being off and on (chiefly on) for forty years (between 1638 and 1682) a Selectman of Watertown, or serving in some other public capacity. Think about this a moment! Those were troublous days. There were jealousies and rivalries—desire for special privileges as to the use of meadows and pastures for their live stock, desire for the largest and most fertile farm lands, desire for power, for high place, for friendship with the Governor—for a thousand and one preferences, in short. And yet, in the midst of all these jealousies, this man had held highest office in his home town for about forty years, and had been chosen as an arbitrator of every dispute as to land grants and remote meadow uses. What a record of popularity, of high character, of recognized justice of attitude not to mention tact! What politician of these days could hope to hold the fickle love of his constituents through such a period of turbulence and suspicion! Methinks, in that moment when the President of the United States stood in silent contemplation before that gravestone, could the progenitor of the Coolidges have spoken, he would have said quietly, and with as dry a humor as Calvin Coolidge's own:

"Well, how's politics? Can you go me one better in the year of grace, 1925? You'll find you have to stick, like it or not, for I wished it on you and it's in the blood! But I certainly am proud that you got the Presidency! They didn't have that when I was young enough to have a try at it, and my grandson couldn't compete with fine old George Washington, although he backed him up all he could!"

There was another bond in common between those two men, that that tense moment ought to have been able to speak to—both of them would have been able to speak to the law. Strange, in every generation, in every branch of the family, there have been lawyers, diplomats (its cousin), writers (another cousin), as well as persistent office holders! The first John Coolidge inventoried estates, witnessed wills, drew up legal documents, was a witness for all manner of legal matters, and it gives one quite a start to find at every turn, while tracing matters far afield from the Coolidge history, his name signed to documents dealing with family matters in Cambridge and Boston and Sudbury, as well as Watertown, for men whose names were prominent in that early time. It is amusing, therefore, to read the effusions of news reporters who have tried to make Calvin Coolidge out a descendant of farmer folk, and poor, but honest, and thrifty plain people, as the old story books put it, for in those days only the man of education and highest culture and means was able to acquire the learning which made such legal powers possible. And John Coolidge, back in England, had had all of the advantages that a family of birth and breeding and wealth could give him, and the social standing, as well, that was the right of the gentry.

In Bond's History of Watertown, there is the statement that the name of Coolidge—although possibly not spelled just this way always—first appears in the Rolls of the Hundreds, when Edward the First, for the first time in history, made up a tax list, as we would call it today, for the purpose of kingly revenue. (How times repeat themselves.) Only those who owned land and estates and were of family importance enough to add to the kingly coffers found their names upon these rolls, so that in recompense for the taxation there is the satisfaction of this proof of financial standing. It was in 1327, that the De Coulinges were assessed for lands, therefore, in Wimpole, Cambridgeshire, England. The origin of this name is open to two interpretations, but the proof is fast becoming settled for the latter of the two. The custom of taking names from the village in which they resided, or from the names of their big estates, had been originated with the Norman conquest, and the Saxons, themselves, while pretending to despise all things Norman, took up this custom which appealed to their pride. In this way the family may have taken their names from the town of Cowling or Couling, in which they had their estate. Or, what seems more probable today, facts having come to light which were not known at the time of Bond's History, they themselves were of the nobility of France, the de Coulinges, and took part in the Norman conquest. That John Coolidge, their descendant, dared to venture across the unknown seas to a new world would seem to bear out this latter theory, so inheriting the courage and daring of his Norman-French ancestors. If this latter theory is correct, the President may indeed claim to be the noblest blood of France—although as it is he can claim to the gentry of England—and in either case is far from the scion of the simple farmer stock that is so played up by romantic reporters, who like to bring him close to the common people. A feature that would add to this idea is the presence of the fleur de lis in the original coat of arms of the family.

A word about this coat of arms would not be amiss, for here we have one of those coincidences that to some who believe this word is much abused seems rather the result of a law of cause and effect. It is described in Burke's Dictionary of Arms as a shield with griffin, sometimes couchant, sometimes rampant. The motto is VIR-TUTE ET FIDE. Admirers of President Coolidge will declare that no truer words could have been chosen so many centuries ago to express his characteristics. Would it not seem that this choice only proves what appeals to them most in life, and each generation has built thereon, inheriting the same idealism, until we have today the culmination of that building through the centuries—CALVIN COOLIDGE. With virtue with integrity, with high ideals, clean-minded and clean-bodied. Doing all things with fidelity or loyalty, and having faith in all that is good. There have been no notorious scandals in this family, no disgraceful affairs. Falls from grace, perhaps, as with all humans, but no shameful family matters that make for newspaper notoriety and whispering tongues. As for that griffin couchant, and rampant—what a significant choice! Peaceful, law abiding, slow to wrath, forgiving and forgiving in all long suffering—until the foundation of principle seemed attacked, then indeed RAMPANT. As behold, Mr. Coolidge and the Boston police strike! He dared where others feared, and he dared where others advised by the practice law in Northampton, it made him Vice President!

And it was this same determined stand for the right and just, the same impatience with injustice, that we believe sent John Coolidge from England to Watertown in 1630. At that time the family was stationed at Arrington, where, during the reign of Henry the eighth, they are recorded as of wealth and great respectability, having the title of Sir and Gentleman in the early parish records. If we could know for a fact how it happened that this young man, only twenty-seven years of age, but recently married, and with a small son, decided to set forth for the western world, I feel sure that we should have a most stirring romance. What influence sent him from the homestead that held the respect and affection of the English community? High station, had adequate means of support. What, then, was lacking? What great motive impelled him to relinquish these worldly advantages that his family had gained?

It is not hard to guess! England in the grasp of an arrogant, strong-willed King—Charles the first, who thrice had dismissed parliament because it failed to do his behest. No parliament! Arbitrary courts of high commission. Star chambers! Money raised by every unconstitutional and doubtful means! What a familiar sound it has—oppression, political, financial, social! Can one imagine an ancestor of Calvin Coolidge supinely submitting? Hardly! Today Calvin Coolidge could deal with such a situation without migrating. Today those of Coolidge blood could face down such oppression and overturn it. They did in the Revolution! But America of 1900, and England of 1600—there is a far cry between!

Although John Coolidge was of the gentry, and as such was unoppressed personally, it has been shown to be a Coolidge characteristic not to brook such a state of affairs. Perhaps, too, he had that keen far-sight, or insight, which showed him what the following years were to bring, and later he might well have been glad that he was not in England to live through the beheading of Charles, the rule of Cromwell, and to bequeath to his children the turbulent history of the next century.

He was the youngest of eight children, five of them sons. His father, William, had died in 1618, and his will, recorded at Cottenham, no doubt divided his estate. John's mother, Margaret Mayse, died two years later. His sisters had married well—one into the royal House of Essex. Being the youngest son, with all his family settled in their lives and homes, what was there to hold him to England seething with oppression and tumult? There was no line of succession with four older brothers. There was no longer duty to beloved parents. The new world, with all its alluring hidden fortune beckoned.

Presumably Governor Winthrop was his friend—events in the new land so indicate, where his grant of land in Watertown was most desirable—associates, friends among the better English families, were planning to come with the new Governor to the colony of Massachusetts Bay. This was true for the first time since ships had set sail for the new western world, for with a resident governor, a man of high estate in England, youth of his own class felt the urge of adventure. What wonder that the thrill of rose-colored adventure swept this young man from English shores!

So John, strong in the youthful vigor of his twenty-seven years—as the age of eighty-eight to which he lived proves—set sail with his equally brave, loyal wife Mary, and their tiny son, landing in June 1630 at Salem. Seventeen ships sailed in 1630, of which fourteen sailed before June first. On April 8th four ships, the Arbella, the Jewell, the Ambrose, and the Talbot sailed from the Isle of Wight, the Arbella carrying the Governor, his Deputy, Sir Richard Saltonstall, and fifteen earliest Watertown families. These landed first at Salem, but the settlers were dissatisfied here, so that on June 17th—a day of destiny in nearly every branch of the Coolidge family—(Continued on Page 3)

PAINTED A "PARE WHISTLER"

French Artist Later Finds His Work Priced at 150,000 Francs—Much Litigation in Prospect.

A still life painting ascribed to Whistler and priced at 150,000 francs has been declared by the courts to be in reality the work of a French painter, Stanny Stassy. The Frenchman is said to have painted it eighteen years ago in one day on a bet; he then sold it for eighty francs and next saw it as a famous picture with Whistler's name in the corner.

It was the reproduction of the picture in a book on Whistler, in which it was loaned to the artist, that brought about the expose. Mr. Stassy and a fellow painter named Babin, it was shown in court, painted the same group of flowers, a vase, a jug and a glass of wine on a wicker, with two of their pretty models as judges.

Some time ago, when Babin sold his copy, the dealer indignantly charged that it was merely a copy of Whistler's, and for proof showed him the photograph in the book. Babin told Stassy of his experience and the latter searched until he found the picture, which had traveled at increasing prices from dealer to dealer.

Stassy filed suit to recover the picture and have the signature changed, and asked for damages. Experts supported his contention, and the court now has upheld it to the extent of ordering Stassy's signature to replace that of Whistler.

The dealer who last bought the picture, paying for it 100,000 francs, says he will seek redress from the dealer who sold it to him, and continuous litigation on down the line may result.—New York Tribune.

PREFER THE YELLOW PEARL

Oriental Peoples Consider the Colored Gem Superior to the White in Many Respects.

Most persons have placed the lustrous white pearl above all others. The Chinese, however, together with other eastern peoples, prefer the yellow pearl, believing that it preserves both luster and color longer than the white. This pearl is said to owe its yellow to the fact that the oysters have been allowed to die and putrefy in their shells, the shells opening of themselves on the death of the oyster.

This custom has been ascribed to the fact that the pearl generally lies close to the edge of the shell, and it is feared that many fine pearls would be spoiled if the process of opening the shell with a knife were practiced.

Black pearls are very much valued. The famous necklace of black pearls belonging to the late Empress Eugenie was sold for $25,000.

Pink pearls are much desired among the Buddhists, who employ them profusely in the adorning of their temples. The inhabitants of Chipanga are said to place a pink pearl in the mouth of a dead relative or friend before cremation of the body.

Male Deer Shed Horns Each Year.

All male deer, known as stags, bucks or harts, have solid, branching horns, or antlers, which they shed each year. Excepting reindeer, female deer, also called hinds or does, do not bear antlers, nor do the young, which are known as fawns. Antlers are outgrowths from bone and are at first very sensitive, being covered with flesh and velvety skin. When the antlers are fully developed the skin dries and is removed by rubbing against trees, leaving bare bones.

Pleasure in Store.

Having been served with a wedge of some yellow substance, the husband poked at it cautiously with his fork, and finally turned it over heavily on his plate, asking:

"What is this?"

"Pound cake. What of it?" the wife replied.

"Nothing," said the husband. "I thought my section weighed more than a pound. What are you going to make next?"

"Marble cake," said the wife demurely.

In a Manner of Speaking.

The Browns lived in a third-story apartment. Mr. Brown, coming home one evening, found his better half in an excited frame of mind. She insisted to tell him of an experience she had just had.

Smelling smoke in a room off the light court, she thought the building was on fire, and proceeded: "I tore down the front stairs, and found everything all right there; then I tore down the back stairs, and found no sign of fire there."

Here Mr. B. interrupted long enough to inquire: "If you tore down both the front stairs and the back stairs, how in the world did you get back up here?"

Brown got no dinner that evening.

Supposed to Be Funny.

Bilkins is fond of riddles. Here is the latest infliction he is trying on his friends:

"It was done when it was begun; it was done when it was half done, and yet it wasn't done when it was finished. Now, what was it?"

Of course his friends could not guess. Whereupon Bilkins explains. "Timothy Johnstone courts Susanah Dunn. It was Dunn when it was begun; it was Dunn when it was half done, and yet it wasn't Dunn when it was done—for it was Johnstone."

ONE THING AND ANOTHER

Written by Leverett D. G. Bentley

Impatience has been voiced in certain quarters that prospective candidates for the Mayorality of this city are still silent. These critics, who like to see the political pot boiling, would have Midsummer rallies, no doubt, at which aspirants for office could be seen and heard. For some reason or other those who plan to run for Mayor, or he who plans to run for Mayor, whichever it may be, cannot be "smoked out." It seems a pity, too, that it cannot be definitely known at an early date who is or who are going after the office in December. We wish we could do something to relieve the anxiety of our friends who are so eager to have "something doing."

The best we can do, and that is more than some others dare, is to say that if we were to be a candidate we would have the following planks in our platform:

Free public garages.

Free gasoline, plus a slight fee sufficient to pay overhead charges.

More traffic signs in Nonantum Square, the same to be constructed in the form of shade trees in order to produce a forest effect.

Pedestrians barred from sidewalks which would be given over exclusively to bicycle riders.

Free movies, day and evening, with ice cream cones served at the matinee at no expense to the public. Cigarettes distributed free at the evening show.

A radio broadcasting apparatus in the Aldermanic chamber for sending out the proceedings of the board at both public and executive sessions.

Free radio sets in every home for reception of same.

Free lunches to be distributed from stands placed at points a quarter-mile apart in every main thoroughfare of the city.

Free rides on the steam railroads. An airplane service to supplement the Middlesex & Boston lines, with free rides to taxpayers (poll included).

Free—well, if we decide to extend our platform we will give public notice in a subsequent issue.

We doubt if one can imagine, especially during this season of the year when imaginations run low, a more embarrassing, or at least a more bewildering moment than that recently experienced by an office associate of ours. It was a hot afternoon and he had just returned from lunch. As we observed him enter we were surprised to see him clutching a package of cigarettes. These he tossed on his desk, with a manner that indicated nervousness. "Got so you have to carry them in your hand as well as your mouth?" we remarked. "Now just a minute," he retorted, "those are not mine." Of course we had an open chance to come back with, "Where did you steal them?" but, as we have said before, it was one of the warmest days of last week and were in no mood to indulge in extended comedy dialogue. We waited for the forthcoming explanation which we knew was inevitable. What do you suppose happened to me, he went on. "Proceed, proceed," we urged. "Well, I never had anything like it happen to me before and I hope I won't again." We could stand this no longer and demand the facts without further delay. "I was on School street, in front of City Hall," he began, "when just a few feet ahead of me was a young woman. I paid no particular attention to her until I noticed that she had stopped to open her hand-bag. She was fishing in it for something and just as I got along she dropped this package of cigarettes on the sidewalk. Thinking I was doing the gentlemanly thing I stooped and picked them up, but before I could hand them to her she had hurried on. She knew she had dropped them and that I had recovered them, but for some reason or other she didn't want them any more. Now I didn't know what to do exactly, but I started to quicken my pace and I called, 'Pardon me, but you dropped these.' She heard me, I am sure, but apparently she preferred not to be known as the possessor of cigarettes. It may have been that or it may have been she didn't want to engage in conversation with me. I don't know which. But she made me feel like a fool."

We suggested that the young woman may have felt like a fool too. "Possibly," our associate agreed, "but I wish you'd tell me what to do with these cigarettes." "Smoke them," we suggested. "Not on your life," he answered, "they're too strong for me."

It has been suggested by a reader of this column that we say something about the uniforms of policemen, urging that regular patrolmen be permitted to wear Summer uniforms the same as traffic officers. We are not sure but the police would be quite willing, for it must be a trifle uncomfortable in warm weather to be compelled to wear clothing of such heavy material as is used for blue uniforms. But we understand that it is not the character of the uniform that interests Newton policemen but a desire that they wear. The question has been before the city government for some weeks and possibly months and no solution has been reached—that is the police are still expected to pay for their own. There are several things that occur to us in this connection. The Boston police strike in 1919, resulted in an increase of pay for the police of that city. Among the features of the readjustment was the furnishing of uniforms. Other cities included, and numerous municipalities added a provision for uniforms at the expense of the city or town. Newton did not join in this latter arrangement, however. Before the police strike the wages of "cops" were decidedly low. They are higher now but no more in harmony with the increased cost of living than in many other places in Massachusetts. Most other departments include in their membership some first class politicians. We refer to news stories printed in the Boston papers to show that "shake-ups" are not infrequent in many cities and towns. If there are any politicians in the Newton police department their scope is limited to personal ambition and advancement. They do not operate a political machine guaranteed to deliver a certain number of votes for this or that candidate. We are not in a position to say that there is no such machine in the making, but we do know that it will be a long, long time before it reaches steam-roller proportions. We are not prepared to advise the police what to do and we are glad that the Newton department is not a political machine. We do believe, however, that if Newton is to expect the very best from those who "pound the sidewalks" and try the doors and seek to keep the city clean, that these men should have fair treatment.

Newton is not one of those cities whose "night life" may be made the topic of discussion or investigation. Or if it is then we have missed something and would eagerly await an introduction to "goings on" if such there be. It would be the height of humor to picture our home town afflicted with such things as a "midnight club." The experiment has been tried but it did not get very far. Of course in that case outsiders came here with a notion that by securing property in a fairly isolated section they could cater to the wants of "jazz babies" of both sexes and incidentally accumulate a tidy sum. They didn't expect to draw their patronage from Newton, or if they did it was to be in no considerable quantity. As far as we have been able to define "night life in Newton" it consists of late automobile parties passing through, sometimes with a maximum of noise and a minimum of good behavior. But as long as no stops are made Newton can stand it. Some of our villages are much livelier at night than they ever were, but only because an eating-place attracts them and it is hardly fair to the proprietors of these establishments to find fault because their patrons are partial to early morning feeds. As we understand it there is legitimate reason for keeping open all-night lunch rooms. Street railway employees, milkmen and others who work at unseemly hours must have food and they are entitled to the necessary facilities. If some stray party of roisterers "blows into town" and makes a racket the blame is not to be attached to the law-abiding restaurant-keepers and their regular customers. On the whole Newton has every reason to congratulate herself that "midnight clubs" have no place within its borders. It is no sign of progress to have such gay places in our midst. Here, in our opinion, is an instance where Newton people have reason to be proud to have the Garden City called a "hick town."

You have seen fit to lambaste the bad manners of certain street railway patrons, writes N. W. B., "but I think there is one you have overlooked. If I am correct, I trust you will find room for this letter. I refer to the men who plant themselves in the front vestibule of a trolley car and make it difficult for other passengers to leave. This is the situation, especially when the car is crowded. Not long ago I witnessed an incident that made me boil with rage. A young man was leaning against the front door when two old ladies sought to leave the car at Harvard Avenue. All on, did this young man move or offer assistance. He did not. He merely stood his ground while the old ladies, whose steps were none too firm, tried to pass him without walking on his feet. This they should have done, but, as I have already stated, they were ladies. The young man's presence actually amounted to a hurdle. The day has gone by, it seems, when conductors and motormen are interested in the comfort of the passengers, so I did not appeal to the conductor of that car. I was busy restraining myself from punching the young man's nose. As a member of the weaker sex I could have accomplished nothing more than to attain undesirable publicity.

Hence I am writing this for your column and am sure it will make me feel a little happier if it is printed therein.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, July 27. With the Tennessee evolution trial in full swing, speculation is growing in Washington as to its possible effects on national legislation. Predictions are freely made that the backwash from this sensational legal battle will leave its marks on the next session of Congress.

The possibility of a special session of Congress being called in the event of a coal strike increases the interest in the Tennessee court proceedings and the national Congress. Inasmuch as the questions at issue involve the power of the State in educational matters some have advanced the opinion that certain legislators will attempt to bring the matter to the attention of the Federal government. It could only be foisted upon the Congress by proposed legislative measures involving the principles which are at stake in the Tennessee case.

There is some talk as to the effect that the matter will have on legislation proposing a Federal department of education and public welfare. The agitation for this new department subsided during the last three or four years but the publicity attending educational issues is apt to revive interest. The more conservative people seem to believe that it is a matter for the Courts to decide and not for the consideration of the legislative bodies. For that reason it appears that members of Congress who attempt to capitalize upon the Tennessee publicity to further their own individual aims for public recognition will not receive any widespread encouragement. The most that can be expected from the introduction of bills relating to the evolution issue, it is said, is acrimonious debate and a revival of religious and political hatreds.

There is another question which may possibly be involved and that deals with censorship. The State of Tennessee has exercised a certain form of censorship prohibiting the inclusion of scientific data relating to evolution in text books for use in schools. The question is asked, "If Tennessee law is upheld how will it affect the publication of books and newspapers?" It is an ordinary matter for educational bodies to protest against the restrictions placed on education by legislatures that prescribe the teaching of scientific subjects along censored lines and the press to protest vigorously against restrictions on its freedom. The average person does not realize that the newspapers and other publications are voluntarily limited by the position of public opinion on every great question as far as it can be divined, whether of war or peace, prohibition or evolution.

Appropos of the evolution trial, one of the foremost authorities on history has said:

"It is apparently impossible today for the press to attempt in its columns to discriminate among these different forms of opposition to the existing order, or to express a sympathetic interest in any inquiry leading to a better understanding of the differences among them, since an effort to comprehend their purpose is interpreted as an approval of it." Veteran political leaders are really concerned about making the topic of evolution a football of party politics.

One of the favorite stunts during a dull political season is to provoke speculation on Cabinet changes. At present there is considerable discussion regarding the remodeling of the President's Cabinet. Several likely candidates have been trotted out and discussion centered around their qualifications, politically and geographically. Though the talk of change in his official family grows from day to day, Mr. Coolidge has nothing to say about the situation.

The busiest man in Washington today is Lincoln C. Andrews, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in charge of prohibition enforcement. He has been working out a program of reorganization with the hope of making the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act popular. Mr. Andrews will find himself confronted with difficulties if he adheres to his announced program of ignoring recommendations from senators and congressmen as to appointments in prohibition forces. Whatever chances there were of keeping prohibition out of politics at the outset have been lost in the developments since 1919. Prohibition officials are meeting here this week with a view to changing the personnel and tightening up on enforcement throughout the country. While Mr. Andrews attempts to put the dry forces on a business basis are commendable, nobody believes for a minute that the political angles can be wiped out.

The Treasury Department in its efforts to increase the circulation of paper money and so economize in the cost of production, finds the greatest resistance factor is superstition. Despite all pretenses the average American citizen, especially those with sporting interest to indulge in betting, will not accept two-dollar bills. A special commission representing the Treasury Department is now at work on a plan to cut down the size of the silver certificates and increase the number of two-dollar bills for general circulation.

Several suggestions have been made to increase the popularity of the two-dollar bill but it will require a considerable educational program to overcome the bogey of bad luck. Proposals have been made to reduce the size of the silver certificates so that 12 bills will be cut from one sheet of paper instead of eight as at present. It is argued that this would save paper and handling charges for 12 bills will be printed at one operation.

GLIMPSE OF EARLY AMERICA

Life in Old Cooperstown, N. Y., Placid Until the Arrival of the "Fire Demon."

Cooperstown, in New York state, must have been a quaint and interesting place in the days when James Fenimore Cooper, the novelist, lived there. Mr. James Fenimore Cooper, the grandson, gives us in his delightful book, "Legends and Traditions of a Northern County," a glimpse of manners in Cooperstown in the period following the War of 1812.

In those days, says Mr. Cooper, doctors and lawyers were marked men and went about their tasks deliberately in long black coats and with black silk stocks wound round their long necks, for they were all tall and thin, except one lawyer, who violated custom by being very tall and very fat. They never hurried and never forgot the dignity of their occupation. In fact, no one hurried. In the evening when the mail arrived everyone sauntered to the post office. Old and young were there; the news was discussed, and plans were made for the next day. Joy and sorrow usually came by mail.

The only event that could arouse the town was a fire; then it went mad. The firemen fought one another, rather than the fire, and the townspeople in their misdirected zeal destroyed what the fire spared. I have often admired the foresight of my great-grandmother, who when the hall once caught fire ordered all the doors and windows locked and bolted and told the servants to put out the fire while she took care of the fire department. She did so by pouring boiling water on those who tried to enter the house.

One night when the Central hotel burned a fireman of "Deluge No. 1" seized the vantage post at the top of the ladder, but that was intolerable to the men of the rival hose companies, and they turned hoses on him until he was drowned from his position—while the hotel burned. Next to the small boy who saved furniture from burning by smashing it the pugnacious and jealous fireman was the best friend of the fire.—Youth's Companion.

AGREEABLE PLACE TO READ

Train Declared to Be Best Place for This Pastime, Adhering to Certain Precautions.

The most agreeable place to read any book is on the train. One is comparatively safe from interruption, one cannot be annoyed by the telephone, one almost always has a good light both by day and by night.

Two suggestions will be found practical: In general sit on the right side of the train; then you will usually have no track outside your window. On the left side freight trains, running in the same direction, keep intervening between you and the light, and it usually seems as if every freight train was at least four miles long; when your railway car has finally passed it and you hear the maddened snort of the freight locomotive, maddened because you have escaped, your own train then stops at a station just long enough to permit the entire freight train to pass, when once more you begin the tedious process of overhauling it.

Therefore, sit on the right side of the train. Secondly, ride backward, if you can. It is easier on the eyes. In this attitude, the trees, posts and landscape fade gently and gracefully away, whereas sitting forward, they rush furiously and directly into your defenseless face. —William Lyon Phelps in Scribner's Magazine.

Topaz of Various Colors.

The topaz may be pink, as well as blue or yellow, and it may also be colorless and still be a topaz. Or it may be a rich reddish brown. There's a red brown Colorado topaz at the museum that would warm you on a cold day with its glow. As for the clear varieties of topaz—from Maine, New Hampshire and Utah, as well as from the Ural mountains—they are lovely as diamonds, though lacking the dazzling brilliance of that hardest of all stones.

What Happened to the Violets.

Dad was a trifle near-sighted. Blue-belle had been presented with a fine bunch of violets, but they had disappeared, and she was very much put out. It was her intention to wear them to the matinee and she had placed them in the refrigerator the evening before to keep fresh. After listening to her complaints for a while, dad spoke up.

"I made myself a salad last night, daughter. I guess I ate your violets with mayonnaise."

Peanuts on the Train.

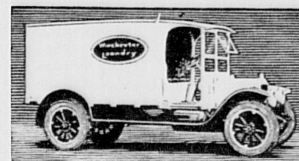

In a coat recently made in a Long Island train leaving Pennsylvania station for Jamaica salted peanuts took the lead in a list of the things people eat to while away the trip, says the New York Sun.

Out of a possible 100 persons in the car 14 were eating something. Six were eating salted peanuts, one had a big red apple, two had raisins, one was eating fruit tablets, one chocolate peppermints, two had dates put up in small boxes and one youngster was busily licking the paint off a lollipop.

Perhaps because they had heard that peanuts have many vitamins in a concentrated form or perhaps because you get a lot for a nickel—whatever the reason they were the most popular confection.

very good for "Y" boys as they have not had an organized team in the field for many years.

Last Saturday, fifteen boys in number set out on a hike with Mr. Jeffries, Assistant Boys' Secretary at the "Y" for Prospect Hill, Waltham. They left at 10 A. M., returning at 2 P. M. A good time was reported. Since the hike proved successful many more excursions and educational trips are also planned for the summer months.

Mr. Arthur Jeffries was a guest at Camp Frank A. Day over the last week end. He brought back reports that the boys are having a fine time and everyone is happy.

Many boys are learning to swim in the beginners class for boys on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings. This is proving a great attraction among the non-swimming boy members. They are given a button when promoted to the regular swimming group who swim every day at 3 P. M., except on Saturday, when they swim at 10 A. M.

Could we but in vision see Ourselves the boys and men God meant,

We truly never more would be The men and boys we are—content.

EDITORIAL

We have previously hinted that in establishing our Planning Board as a board of survey, the city government has taken a rather radical step in the development of the city.

We would like to call the attention of real estate owners to the drastic provisions of the board of survey act under which the Planning Board may at any time take action.

The statute reads as follows:—
"If any person shall open for public travel and private way the location, direction, width, grades and plan of draining of which have not previously been approved in writing by the board of survey in the manner provided in said sections, neither the city or town nor other public authority shall place any public sewer, drain, water pipe or light in, or do any public construction work of any kind or make repairs on such private way."

"No register of deeds shall record any plan showing thereon proposed ways in any town having a board of survey unless there is endorsed thereon a certificate of said board or other proper officer by it designated, that all laws applicable to such plan have been complied with."

Land owners should take particular note of the provisions that in developing their land without the approval of the Planning Board, they can neither have sewer, water nor street lights. We recall that when the zoning ordinance was first presented to the board of aldermen by the Planning Board that Alderman White led the opposition to the single residence zone on the ground that the "common people" (by the way just who are the "common people") should have the right to build two family houses if they wished. We have yet to learn whether Alderman White raised any objection to the acceptance of the board of survey act, a far more drastic restriction on development and building than anything ever considered by the city government.

While we have confidence in the wisdom of the Planning Board as at present constituted, we are of the opinion that in giving it the power of boards of survey the city government has not sufficiently investigated public sentiment on the subject.

The decision of the Public Utilities approving the increase made by the railroads entering Boston in the 12 ride commutation rates of over a year ago, was not unexpected as two of the three railroad corporations are evidently in need of the money. It is rather tough on the residents of the line of the Boston Albany road, however, to pay an increase which is not needed by that corporation but which under a peculiar statute must be kept uniform with rates for similar service rendered in suburban Boston by other railroads. It is manifestly unjust to compel residents of Newton to pay the same rate of fare as Malden or Quincy, just because the New Haven or the Boston & Maine companies are not operated as economically as the Albany.

With the tremendous amount of new building going on in this city, the plumbers' strike is particularly unfortunate. Strange it is how labor agitators absolutely ignore the fact that contracts for work are based on the prevailing rate of wages and that the employers must carry out their contract, and that it is unfair to compel a change in wages while such contracts are in force. In all fairness, if a change in wages is to be made, it should take effect at a future date, far enough ahead to allow employers to prepare to meet it.

The badly hoo trial just concluded at Dayton, Tenn., has not been helpful neither to religion nor science.

Be a wreckless driver not a reckless one.

HOW DID YOU DIE?

Did you tackle that trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day?

With a craven soul and fearful?
Oh, a trouble's a ton, or a trouble's an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it.
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only how did you take it?

You are beaten to earth? Well, well what's that?
Come up with a smiling face!
It's nothing against you to fall down flat.

But to lie there—that's disgrace.
The harder you're thrown, why the higher you bounce.
Be proud of your blackened eye!
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts;

It's how did you fight and why?
And though you be done to the death, what then?
If you battled the best you could,
If you played your part in the world of men,

Why, the Critic will call it good.
Death comes with a crawl, or comes with a pounce.
And whether he's slow or spry,
It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts.

But only how did you die?

BASE BALL

The West Newton A. A. (colored) baseball team lost a well played game to Highland A. A. of Newton Highlands, at the West Newton Common on Monday evening, of last week.

Owing to the disappointment of the Newton Athletic Team captained by George Owens, the management of the West Newton team had to arrange a game at the last moment rather than disappoint the spectators who have followed the team all the year, and so consented to play the Highland team, who had on their team such players as Harris of Penn State, Leahy of Canisius College, Dunphy of Boston College and the wonderful little shortstop, "Runt" Ward who today is one of the best in the business, which proved so on Monday evening.

The colored boys were outclassed seemingly, as they did not play the game which has always been theirs being such a fine lot of runners and base stealers, the crowd always looks for a fast game from them, but of course all teams will have their off days.

Next Monday evening at the West Newton Common, the colored boys will play the St. Paul's of Cambridge, a team made up of Rindge and Cambridge High and Latin players, which should prove a good attraction. On this team will be Cote, a brother of "Pete" Cote, captain of the next year's Holy Cross team and equally as good as his brother.

The colored boys will send their best at this team in the person of Cooper who has stopped the best of them on the diamond this season.

This game will start at 6:15 P. M. to give the fans nine innings of base ball.

KIDDIES' DAY

Newton Lodge of Elks will entertain the children of the city at Norumbega Park next Wednesday and the preliminary registration shows that there will be about 3500 children who will attend the outing.

A lot of towns in Florida would have bid a million dollars for that evolution trial—James J. Montague in New York Herald Tribune.

THE DAYTON TRIAL

The following article from the Editor and Publisher gives an interesting sidelight on the trial now in progress at Dayton, Tennessee.

Dayton, Tennessee, July 16.—Some 225 newspaper men, representing the press of the world, are here covering the queerest story of the generation, weird as a nightmare, side-splittingly funny, darkly tragic, a huge joke, a sinister threat, running the whole gamut of politics, religion, science and sociology, all about everything, all about nothing, and by all odds the most difficult newspaper assignment of many years.

To the newspaper men the trial drags along slowly, tiresomely, bitterly. At the other end of the wire it no doubt reads like good copy, but to the sweltering, agonized, exhausted group of men and women on the job in the yellow tinted courtroom, it has already gone on long enough. The reporters are all sick of the grease soaked food, the upsetting water the jungle heat and the exhausting, Herculean work, recording a play of emotions, ranging from hateful words that sting like bullets to bowing and scraping court manners smacking of ill-concealed deceit. Everyone's nerves are racked to shreds. Hours and hours in a suffocating room, the air heavy with cawing, peevish, cynical acrimony and bitterness descending to malignity, on issues sometimes so thin as to border on farce and sometimes so momentous as to suggest revolutionary consequences.

Wrapped up in this case is "dynamite" in a thousand and one different packages. Some of the reporters are writing controversial matter, arguing the case, asserting that civilization itself is on trial. The average news writer is trying to stick to the facts as revealed in court, but this is a slippery, tricky job at best.

The work is not without its personal hazards. Henry L. Mencken, writing for the Evening Sun, of Baltimore, has made comments which have particularly aroused the violent indignation of elements of Dayton society. Mencken is said to have received threats against his person, but investigation does not confirm this story. The Daytonians in general are growing bitter at the press because of the tone of the despatches a large number of men are sending out about the trial. For a time early in the week the situation all the way around had grown so tense that trouble was feared and might easily have occurred if anyone had set off a spark. If Dayton people are "sore" at some of the newspaper people, it is equally true that some of the newspaper people are bitter at Dayton. Probably it will all blow off in hot steam, but no one will ever deny that the elements of tragedy have been mixed here.

Covering the trial, with the 200 newspaper men and special writers are photographers and what-not, who have been sufficiently busy here since last Friday. The array of journalists on hand has been called the most distinguished gathering in America, outside of Washington, and outside of National conventions, in many years. Maybe so. But certainly it is the most exhausted.

Dayton has been a furnace most of the time, and the heat of the courtroom might lead to one's imagination a foretaste of the horrors of Hell. The influx of newspaper men has taxed the capacity of Dayton to render things comfortable to the visitors. There are many many complaints, and the exhausting labor, the vicious heat, and the generally unaccustomed fare has wreaked havoc on many men.

The courtroom is fitted up with long benches lining the arena. On each side are other press tables. On plain splintery deal boards, the copy paper is turned into copy. Voters and distinguished citizens of Rhea county crowd all through the aisles, take the newspaper men's seats, move around so as to prevent hearing the trial procedure, and otherwise hinder.

The ubiquitous photographers are the cock of the walk. They seem to have a peculiar fascination for the judge. Again and again he will delay court opening, or have a short recess for them to turn the crank. One of the snapshots taken of him Tuesday was of him reading the first chapter of Genesis out of a well thumbed Bible, while all about him cameras were snapping and movie cranks turning fast. The unchecked delays of the snapping turtles got so bad that Attorney General Stewart had to protest and a sign of relief went up from the writers as well as the attorneys and the spectators when the judge heeded his request.

Most of the copy is moving by Western Union, although all the press services have wires into the courtroom, as has the Chattanooga News. The Western Union's specially opened office at Dayton is sending unimaginable masses of words. Its daily totals have been running well in excess of 100,000 words; one night alone it cleared 200,000 words out of Dayton. That was the night of the narrow speech. What it will end on Bryan's day-long closing speech of the session would be fabulous to estimate.

THUNDERSTORMS

The thunderstorm is one of the staunchest friends the Massachusetts farmer possesses, in spite of its dread-inspiring appearance and its sinister reputation, and further in spite of the fact that the country districts and not the cities suffer the full force of whatever havoc it may wreak. It is a capricious friend, to be sure, at times seemingly malignant, but properly understood and rightly treated, this type of storm gives the farmer vastly more than it takes. This is one of many interesting conclusions reached by Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, Massachusetts Commissioner of Agriculture.

"The unusual prevalence of these storms during the month of June makes a few observations concerning them timely," said Dr. Gilbert. "Farmers, and particularly farmers' wives, in common with the rest of humanity, are inclined to regard these electrical disturbances with apprehension, in many instances with downright terror. Buildings may be set on fire by lightning, or lives may be snuffed out. During a heavy thunderstorm the average person feels himself in danger, and as the storm progresses with increasingly terrifying aspects that feeling is intensified by the conviction that he is absolutely powerless to do anything to lessen the danger.

"Are these fears grounded in fact, or are they primordial in their nature, harking back to the dim past of our race, survivors of that type of fear which grips the mind of a child in the dark? Let us look at a few figures compiled by the Fire Marshal's division of the State Department of Public Safety.

"For the five-year period ending in 1924, lightning killed 19 persons in Massachusetts, or an average of 3.8 persons a year. With a population of 3,852,356, this is a death rate by lightning of one ten-thousandth of 1 per cent. Or to put it differently, you and I each stand one chance in 101,377 of being killed by a bolt every summer. Surely here is no ground for apprehension in a thunderstorm!

"But if you feel handicapped by this one chance in a million, you may take precautions to still further reduce your danger. As formulated by the National Fire Protection Association, the following directions are probably as good as any:

"Don't go out of doors during a thunderstorm or remain out unless absolutely necessary. Stay inside of building where it is dry, preferably near the center of the roof.

"If there is any choice of shelter choose in the following order: 1—Large metal or metal-frame buildings. 2—Dwellings or other buildings which are protected against lightning. 3—Large unprotected buildings. 4—Small unprotected buildings.

"Avoid the immediate vicinity of electric light currents, lightning conductors and downspouts, screened doors and windows, stoves and fireplaces, telephones or any metal object that projects through the walls or roof.

"If remaining out of doors is unavoidable, keep away from isolated trees, wire fences, hilltops and wide spaces, small sheds and shelters if in an exposed location. Try to reach thick timber, a cave, a depression in the ground, a deep valley, or the foot of a steep cliff, if there are any of these in the vicinity."

"In 1922, taking that year as an average, the total number of fatalities from lightning for the United States was estimated at 503. The number for the registration area (comprising 35 states) was 425. Of this latter number only 22 deaths occurred in cities."

"This great disparity emphasizes a long-recognized truth, that the city, with its many steel-framed buildings and its thousands of telegraph, telephone, trolley and other wires, acts as a gigantic conductor for electrical discharges in its own vicinity, relieving the electrical tension during a gathering thunderstorm and thus preventing that aerial explosion which we call lightning. Using the registration area statistics as a basis, the immunity of the city over the country district would seem to be about 10-12 times. But in the face of these figures, our rural residents must not forget that their chance of being killed by lightning is only one in a million, and the fact that city folks enjoy an even greater immunity should not turn the farmer's hair gray.

"In the absence of definite figures dealing with the relative precipitation from thunderstorms and ordinary rainstorms, it is impossible to say just how much the farmer owes the first-named. Professional observers estimate, however, that 50 to 60 percent of the rainfall in Massachusetts during the crop-growing season is due to thunderstorms. It has been the experience of every farmer, time and again, that they come as a veritable life-saver to crops parched almost to the point of death. Without the thunderstorm farming would be vastly more of a hazard than it is.

"With properly rodded buildings and premises, we may thoroughly enjoy this great spectacular show of nature; and as the heavenly artillery roars in crash after deafening crash, and the lightning bolts sear the blackened sky, we may sit snug in the farmhouse living room, or even on the piazza,

10,000 MILES O'ER LAND AND SEA

Some Experiences and Observations Gathered by the Editor of the Graphic in a Trip Across the Continent and to Far Away Hawaii

I have long cherished a wish to visit the Hawaiian Islands, and when an invitation came from the Secretary of the Navy to make a trip to that delightful country and to witness the Pacific Ocean maneuvers of the United States navy as well, I lost but little time in sending in an acceptance.

From travel experiences in various parts of the United States and Canada I realized there was considerable land in the North American continent, but I must confess that there was more of it than I even imagined. Years ago I considered Chicago as "west" but after traveling in Montana and the Pacific Northwest, I learned that Chicago was "east." I then placed Kansas City as about the center of this country, but found that K. C. was but 42 hours from Boston, while Los Angeles was 54 hours beyond K. C. And such a fifty-four hours. Land, land, land everywhere. And such land, barren, desolate and most uninteresting. We broke our journey with a side trip to the Grand Canyon, one of the few noted places in the country which I had not seen.

I expected a great deal of the Grand Canyon, as it is one of the best advertised places in America, and I had read nearly everything published about it. I must confess to a distinct feeling of disappointment at my first glimpse. It gave me the impression of being at a funeral, everything was so still. The brilliant colorings of which I had read did not appear during the day we spent there, the browns were like our red sandstone and the so called yellows were tawdry and dead. The Canyon grows on one, however, if you stay there long enough, and gradually appreciate its immensity. Just the same, it is a spot I should not care to visit again.

At Albuquerque, there is an interesting Indian shop at the very handsome railroad station, and a stop of half an hour is made to allow passengers to visit it. Indian squaws squat alongside the walk with little jars of colored ware of various kinds, and played for sale. Inside there is a wonderful collection of Indian and Mexican stuff which is most interesting.

On entering California I was struck by the fact that there was so much desert. I had an idea that Southern California was a veritable garden of Eden. But the desert is almost up to the city limits of San Bernardino, and at the everywhere there is irrigation, there you find luxuriant vegetation.

After a brief stop at Los Angeles, I took a night train for San Francisco, where I had been requested to report to Admiral Cootz of the Navy before April 12th. I found that I had to reach the U. S. Arizona by means of the fleet's small boats, and on arriving on board learned that I had been assigned to the U. S. S. Tennessee, one of the best boats in the Navy. About 35 or 40 newspapermen and several senators and members of Congress were guests of the Navy department, and were assigned in groups of five or six to different vessels. On the Tennessee were Congressman Taylor of Colorado, Oliver of Alabama and Linberger of California. With me were Mr. Carter Field, Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune-Herald, and Mr. J. M. Stephenson, Jr., of the South Bend, Ind., News-Tribune.

We were asked to report on board at 9 A. M. Tuesday morning, thus giving us two full days in which to visit in 'Frisco.

I had heard considerable about San Francisco and looked forward to my visit there with great interest. It is a city well worth a long stay and I was sorry my time was limited.

Its newspapers claimed my first attention and I was struck by the fact that in every case when referring to the city, all the papers said "S. F." It was a "S. F." man etc. etc. Another striking fact was the amount of crime reported in the papers. Every edition I saw carried heavy head lines either of a murder, a suicide or fatal automobile accidents. San Francisco papers ought to follow the example of the Des Moines (Iowa) Register and print all the crime news on the second page.

The city has two car lines, one operated by a private company, the other by the city. On Market street, the "Broadway" of the city there are four car tracks, two owned by each, stopping at safety zones marked on the pavement. You risk your life every time you try to take the car moving on the second track, for the motor man on the car on the first track, will keep right on coming.

The fare is but five cents on either lines and it is said that both lines are making a small profit.

I found to my astonishment that "S. F." was not located geographically as I had expected. If you take your left hand and bring your fore finger round so it nearly touches your thumb, you have a rough idea of San Francisco bay and the Golden Gate, with "S. F." occupying that part of the illustration represented by the thumb. Berkeley and Oakland, being about in the position represented by the second joint of the fore finger. The bay is 60 miles long and its only outlet is thru the Golden Gate, so named on account of the light from the setting sun making a path of gold out to the ocean. It is a pretty conceit, only marred by the fact that there is so much fog there that the golden sea is rarely seen.

I spent considerable time at Golden Gate park, one of the finest municipal parks I have ever seen. It is said that everything in the park is artificially grown, but it is so carefully done as to almost rival nature itself. In the park is a wonderful aquarium, said to be the finest in the world and certainly is one of the best I have ever seen. An Academy of Science adjoining has some beautiful life sized scenes showing the different animals in their native haunts. All of this is carried out in a most realistic fashion. The M. H. de Young Museum in the park is a most fascinating place, and is fully equal if not superior to the better known Smithsonian Institution at Washington. I could not help comparing the million dollar collection of statuary which is housed in the residence of Mr. J. D. Rockefeller at Tarrytown, N. Y., and seen by only a few friends of Mr. Rockefeller, and this free gift of Mr. de Young to the people of San Francisco and their guests. The park also has an open air theatre or stage on which during the summer season there are Sunday band concerts, the listeners being seated on chairs placed under numerous small trees trimmed in umbrella fashion.

I had a delightful afternoon with Mr. Sumner Clement, a former resident of Newton Centre and Newton Highlands, who resides at Berkeley, across the bay. Here is located the University of California, said to be the largest college in America, and a college without a dormitory. The college has an immense stadium, seating some 75,000 persons, and the campus has a beautiful campus, tall enough to be seen from the San Francisco side of the bay.

We had been requested to report on board ship at 9 A. M. and consequently expected to find motor boats at the dock to enable us to comply with that request. I was at the dock several minutes before nine and waited with growing impatience until long after eleven o'clock. At that time, a lieutenant from another ship, with whom we had scraped acquaintance, took

Quite a number of scouts have taken advantage of the chance to go to the Ohio weekends, without their regular leaders, reporting to the Acting Camp Director at that point. One week, Acting Camp Director Brown took some of the scouts in his sport roadster to the shore, and the scouts had the benefit of a salt water swim. This arrangement will be continued until the last of August, but scouts must, in all cases, secure permission from Mr. Carley or Mr. Brown (Aspinwall 4977) before going as the number that can be taken care of is limited. This gives scouts a chance to pass outdoor tests that they might not otherwise be able to pass until work began in the fall, and also gives them some real camping.

Progress is being made in organizing the "Seascout" ships in Norumbega. The new handbook is available, and two copies have been presented to the Newton Public Library. The movement is open to scouts that have advanced to First Class, and are at least fifteen years of age. Contrary to our first information scouts will not be able to be members of a Seascout Ship and a land troop at the same time, but troops may have a Seascout Crew attached as a patrol. Copies of the new Merit Badge pamphlet of Foundry Practice and the new Merit Badge Book on Insect Life have been ordered and will be placed in the Public Library as soon as received. The Insect Life book is necessarily so large that it could not be sold at the same price as the other small pamphlets, and therefore scouts may obtain it at the library. It should be generally understood that the Merit Badge Pamphlets for the Eagle Scout rank are available at all of the Branch Libraries, the whole collection being at the main library at Newton.

GRADUATES AS RADIO OPERATOR

Kendall W. Guilford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Guilford, of 23 Omar terrace, Newtonville, after a short course in a Boston Radio School, entered the Army Communications School at Camp Vail, N. J., where he graduated late in June. He was one of four who passed the final examinations and his mark of 94.7-100% entitled him to a gold seal diploma. He is now in the Munitions Building, Washington, D. C., on advanced work and practical service awaiting appointment.

KIDDIES DAY

Newton Lodge of Elks is Host for 3800 Children at Norumbega Park

Newton Lodge of Elks played the host last Wednesday to the children of the city and entertained about 3800 at Norumbega Park with an all day picnic.

An efficient committee of the Lodge were ably assisted by Superintendent of Playgrounds Ernest Hermann and about fifty of his directors and assistants.

The previous week, children desirous of attending the picnic were required to register with the playground instructors and every child so registering was given a ticket which gave them admission to the Park, a ride on the merry-go-round, the caterpillar, Dodge 'em, the sea plane, refreshments and admission to the Theatre. The different playgrounds were given colored tickets so it was possible to know from what part of the city the children came from. Special cars were provided by the street railway company, at points convenient to the various playgrounds and the children taken to and from the Park in this manner.

About thirty children from the Peabody Home for Crippled Children added a pathetic note to the affair, but they seemed to enjoy the festivities as much as their more favored playmates. They were paid special attention by Dr. Michael Chirurg and Mayor Childs and took in all the features of the picnic.

The sea plane seemed to attract the most attention and there was a long line of children waiting their turn both here and at the Dodge 'em booth. The Caterpillar and merry go round also claimed a large amount of attention. Dr. Fred M. Lowe, the city physician, had a hospital tent on the grounds and was assisted by six district nurses and nurses from the Newton Hospital. Fortunately there was little need for medical service.

At noon each child was given crackers, a glass of milk and a package of ice cream, 130 gallons of the last being used.

After luncheon the children packed the theatre and enjoyed the special show put on for their benefit by Manager Will White, a member of the Newton Lodge of Elks.

The executive committee comprised William E. Earle, chairman, Dr. L. H. Marshall, M. John Enegess, George M. Heathcote, Walter I. Woodman, Dr. Fred M. Lowe, Dr. Thomas M. Gallagher and Willard L. Sampson.

Among those members and volunteers who assisted in the program were Patrick Carroll, John Feeney, William U. Fogwill, Wilfred Chagnon, Joseph Champeney, Frank Simeone, George Charles and Edward Henikus, Archie Connolly, George Monks, "Ginger" McHugh, William Noone, Peter Butler, Jack McNutt, Thomas A. Franey, William Waters, George Bradley, William Hopkins, Steve Morrell, Robert Vahon John Shaughnessy, Frank L. Wilcox, Mrs. Margaret Fogwill, Mrs. Martin McDonough, Mrs. George Bradley, Mrs. William E. Earle, Miss Helen Nagle and Mrs. W. L. Sampson.

BUILDING STRIKE

On account of the employment of two non union electricians on work in the Classical High school building at Newtonville, the union brick layers, iron workers, plumbers, steamfitters, painters, carpenters and laborers employed on the new High school building went on strike on Tuesday. This is the second time the union men have been called out on strike for acts taking place in another building, and on another job from that on which they were working.

OUT DOOR DANCE

The fourth of the series of outdoor dances under the auspices of the Newton Circle, Inc., and under the direction of the Playground Department, was held last evening on the Newton Centre Playground. The program included community singing and dances for the youngsters, and two hours of dancing on the green for the older folks. The Newton Constabulary Band furnished music.

COOLIDGE ANCESTORS

John Coolidge became a freeman in 1636, but Roger Wellington—and everyone knows of his prominence in the affairs of Massachusetts Bay—did not deign to take this step until he was eighty years old!

That Roger Wellington was notoriously arrogant, and a law unto himself has been often shown, but a most amusing instance of it is recorded in Watertown Selectmen annals, and, strangely, John Coolidge, senior, or Father Coolidge, or old John Coolidge, as he was sometimes lovingly—not disrespectfully—called, was then a selectman. On November 8th, 1664, at a meeting of the Selectmen "at the home of John Coolidge, senior, Roger Wellington and John Willington being warned to the meeting, upon complaint of sum delinquency about the fashion of John's apparil, and they not appearing, they were fined five shillings apiece for non-appearance." In other words, it would seem that young John, desirous of dressing in style, may have incurred the displeasure of these magistrates who were determined that no Massachusetts Bay colonists should dress out of their class or aspire to too great airs, and he and his father, called to account on a complaint, turned up their noses and ignored the summons. It is mighty fortunate for John Coolidge, senior, and certainly saved his embarrassment that his son John (Ensign) had not at that time married Roger Wellington's daughter Mary. (He did marry her in 1679, after the death of his first wife, Hannah Livermore. Both of these names are of significance in the colony, and, besides the glory of these good old names, there runs a tradition that there is in England a goodly fortune waiting the heirs of John Livermore, Hannah's father. (Perhaps we'll have a try at getting it some day!)

At a later meeting of the selectmen, "Roger Willington appearing before them, upon his acknowledgement, his fine was remitted." Evidently some one prevailed upon snippy Roger to humble himself, appear as called, and even apologize for his former rudeness. It would take a master hand at tact to have accomplished this, and my instinct tells me that the man who could remain in one forty years, and keep popular, must have been the one who worked the charm on snippy Roger! But he could not so subdue the proud spirit of the young "dandy"! John Wellington did appear the same day, but insisted upon "justifying himself," and even "in condemning the town as having no power to deal with him for his apparil or to warn him to appear," if you please (so that he must assuredly have been trying to smite the eyes of some lady love with his magnificence and his courage), and so nettled were the fathers of the town by his arrogance that they continued the fine, and the constable was ordered "to deliver it into the files," or, as we would say, collect it, so that John's stubbornness was properly punished, and moreover, there was the added covert threat of authority that "John Willington's delinquency in apparil was to be delt in afterward as the case required." We wonder if John did daunt to dress for his call upon his lady love as he had been doing, after this warning!

John Willington must have improved with age, however, in the matter of yielding to town authority, for in 1678, we find him appointed, on a committee of three—to wit, Father Coolidge, deacon Haestings and Corporal Willington—to see that some who were not obeying town edicts did so. The three together were "to see yt each person that heave not taken the oath of fidelity and allegiance doo take it, as the law requireth." It makes one heave a sigh of relief to discover that this wild young blade finally had learned to yield to law and order! Speaking of law and order, peculiar, isn't it that from the first days in America it seems to have been a Coolidge trait to enforce it? Coincidence? No, cause.

And father John Coolidge was on the first committee that took a census in this town! On the 5th of December 1777 it was voted in town meeting that the "following shall be the men to inspect the several inhabitants of this town according as the law injoins, to-wit, John Coolidge, etc."

Besides all these interesting records of John Coolidge, senior, as a selectman, we find many more of his career in the General Court as a representative, and in law, as has already been said. And, meanwhile, his sons were following in his footsteps. John, junior, the son born in England, probably about 1628, from whom the Sherborn branch of the family is descended, was by profession a carpenter, and, as such, build stockades in the war with King Philip, going to many surrounding towns to aid in the Indian defense. His military services in this war also gave him the title of Ensign and Sergeant, and he was selectman of Watertown from 1644 to 1699. Nathaniel, his brother, was selectman in 1677 and 1692. Peculiarly, in all the records of Coolidges who were selectmen in this town and in others of the next few generations, we do not find that Simon, another brother, born in 1652, and from whom some claim the President is descended, ever held this office. Political publicity seems to have lain dormant in this branch alone, to break out in Vermont about a hundred and fifty years later, but when it did break out, oh my! One has only to read the careers of Col. John Coolidge in Plymouth, and of Calvin Coolidge in Northampton, to see that they made up for all lost time. (One who has met Col. John Coolidge would not wonder that he could not escape such service for his townfolk, for he is cordial, genial, with a wealth of understanding, and a kindness of heart that is a joy to all who meet him. Some have called his son tactful and cold. He may be, but I have never found him so, and that exterior, intensified by the necessity to safeguard himself from political self-seekers, will surely disappear as he grows older and becomes like unto his father.)

But Simon, even if not a selectman,

Had he been descended from the younger brother, Johnathan, he could have claimed descent from Edmund Rice of Sudbury, whose grand-daughter, Martha, was so inconsiderate as to fall in love with him, instead of with Simon.

Or had he been descended from Nathaniel, he could have had excellent reason for being such a warm friend today of Congressman Treadway! Last August, while the President was thrilling American citizens by a vacation lacking in ostentation spent on an old farm in a sleepy mountain village, we read that Congressman Allen T. The Great American Scandal

By Richard Washburn Child

Crime in America is being organized along the lines of "Big Business;" cutthroat competition by unorganized crooks is being eliminated; huge profits are being piled up by syndicates of law-breakers and law-defiers. The power to prevent, punish and deter crime is falling behind in its conflict with the burglar, the gunman and the killer. These sinister organizations are being developed at a time when the recruits for our growing criminal population lack the training and restraint of the old American home and are being drawn into defiance of the law by strange doctrines of "self-expression" and "freedom." The first of a series on the causes and cure of crime.

NEWTON HOSPITAL

Week ending July 25:—Patients in hospital 110, patients paying as much as cost of care or more 46, patients paying less than cost of care 34, free patients, including babies 30, babies born 18, patients treated by out patient department 90, accident cases 17, social service calls at hospital 23, at homes 2.

Judge Bishop of Newton Centre and the Superior Court is among the patients at the hospital, having recently submitted to an operation on one of his knees.

All the beds in the children's ward are full.

On one day of last week there were two vacant rooms in Founders, but hardly had the fact been recorded before two new maternity cases arrived.

The new editorial board of The Scutelus, the paper printed by the students of the Hospital Training School, is made up of the Misses Young, Ambler, Foster and Hooper.

The painting of the third floor of the Nurses' Home has been completed and work is now in progress on the second floor. To arrange for the painting in a building where the accommodations for the inmates are inadequate when all rooms are available has been a difficult task.

Of the eighteen babies born last week eight were boys and ten were girls, and to the joy of the attendants two of the girls were twins. Miss Elizabeth Dixon, who has been supervisor in the medical end of the hospital, leaves this week and is to be married in September to Mr. Foster Barnard of Andover.

Miss Margaret Toland, the hospital

telephone operator, who has been under treatment after an operation for appendicitis, is now well on the way to recovery.

The Know More Kokki Klub, even though it is the vacation season, gathered together enough members to hold an interesting meeting at the hospital last Monday evening.

Mrs. Buffum of Waban has presented the hospital with a miscellaneous collection of two hundred books, many of them standard works, and all of them interesting. Dr. Besse sent to the hospital a marvellous lot of gladioli.

Miss Gertrude Dyer of Newton Centre is acting as relief attendant at the hospital during the summer.

There is no such thing as a howling success. The howling is done by failures.

BACHRACH OUTING

The organization of Bachrach, Inc., held its annual field day Saturday, July 25th, at Silver Lake, Wilmington.

More than 200 of the employees and members of the firm were present and took part in the day's program. The party made the trip from Newton to Wilmington by motor, and a complete roster of sports followed their arrival.

The 100-yd. dash for the men was won by Mr. Frank Michelson; the 50-yd. dash for girls won by Exelia Rabin; the three-legged race for men was won by Carroll Leary and Harry Dickson; baseball throwing for girls was won by Louise Delaney; the sack race for men was won by Mr. Frank Thornhill; the men's 50-yd. dash was won by Edward N. Smith; the race for ladies ("medium stout") was won by Louise Delaney; in the tugs of war, two teams were used—one made up from the Executive Office and one from the Finishing Studio. The Executives won in the men's competition and the Finishing Studio in the girls'.

A seven inning baseball game was played by men's teams picked from the Executive Office and Finishing Studio and in this the Executives won by a score of 9-5. The result of the girls' baseball game was 16-4 in favor of the Executive Offices.

A basket lunch was served. The committees in charge of the outing consisted of Mr. Frank Michelson, ticket and grove committee; Mr. Edward E. Hickey, sports; Miss Kenson McGrath, dancing; Mr. J. Ward Kelly, outing "photo"; Miss Gertrude S. Gower, publicity; Mr. Fred L. Trask, transportation; Mr. Edouard J. Liz-

EDITORIAL

It is noticeable that at most of the public hearings at City Hall on the matter of changing zones, there is always a strong support of petitions to place property in the single residential zone, and strenuous opposition whenever it is proposed to change from a more restricted to a less restricted zone. It is indicative that our people want Newton kept as a residential city, and as far from the Chelsea and Everett style as possible.

The assessors state that on April 1st they found 737 unoccupied dwellings in the city. To this add the permits granted in the last three months for new dwellings and it is evident that Newton will not suffer from a housing shortage for a long time to come.

The Newton Lodge of Elks is doing a fine work in giving the children of this city a real picnic and outing each year. Some of these youngsters have little enough pleasure as it is, and an outing like that of Wednesday is a banner day in the year for them.

The account of the two aldermanic meetings this week will be given in our next issue.

POLICE COURT

In Court Wednesday morning there were so many cases that all contested cases had to be continued. William J. Maher of 40 Stedman street, Jamaica Plain, charged with being drunk and with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor by patrolman Bibbo, had his case continued until Monday, August 3.

Miss Margaret Wood, a maid employed by Mrs. Raymond Wells of 120 Collins road, Waban, was sent to the House of the Good Shepherd by Judge Bacon, after she had been found guilty of larceny of articles of jewelry and clothing from her employer. She was arrested by Inspector Conroy.

Frank Arcese of 224 Chapel street, Newton, was sentenced to one month in the House of Correction and sentence was suspended by Judge Bacon on a charge of threatening John Finelli with violence. He was arrested by patrolman T. Whelan.

Joseph Vertuca of 12 Cottage place, West Newton, was given a suspended sentence of six months in the House of Correction by Judge Bacon for assault and battery on his wife. It was alleged that Vertuca struck his wife with a shoe. He was arrested by patrolman George Mullen.

In Court yesterday morning Henry Geary of 6 Middle street and John Holden of 89 Hawthorn street, were found guilty of assault and battery on two Waltham girls and were sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. They appealed. Geary had first been charged with a more serious offense, but after hearing the evidence Judge Bacon dismissed the complaint and found him guilty of simple assault. The men were defended by Richard McCabe. The names of the two girls were withheld and the trial was private. The men were arrested last week on North street, Newtonville, where they were parked in an automobile with two girls. Serg. ONE THING AND ANOTHER

 Levecret D. G. Bentley

It had to come! The fine hand of someone who couldn't find anything sufficiently "nice" in the English language has got in its work. How many of the readers of this column have met people who make a specialty of dainty conversations; who like to paint the lily by adding something of their own or by repeating that of another and more original friend of the same turn of mind? We have seen and read and listened to these cunning little words and phrases and have asked ourselves why the use of ornate English should be substituted for plain speech. In fact we had concluded that never would we be surprised by some verbal delicacy or coiffure. But we did get a shock. It was down on Long Island, New York, last week. Mark you, it was not in Massachusetts or Boston, which is supposed to be the hotbed of "nice" words and phrases, but in the Empire State. A plain roadside booth covered with signs advertising various brands of cigarettes, candy and ginger ale, had this in large letters—"Soda, Candy and Luncheonette." Get that, "Luncheonette!" We felt that perhaps there was more to it than our cynical mind knew and so we investigated. But we found that the luncheonette, Frankfurt sausage, coffee and milk, from the basis of a "luncheonette." Of course with such a sweet word as this we were sure that there would be something extraordinary about the service. We felt that the counter would be presided over by some fair young creature, with a white frilled cap, a dainty summer gown and "perfectly dear little apron." We anticipated a shower of smiles for our money and maybe a pleasant word or two about the weather. With a "luncheonette" it could not be otherwise, we thought. But again we found ourselves off the track. A husky young man, with his sleeves rolled up and his white apron, none too recent from the laundry, was the presiding genius. He didn't talk like a "luncheonette" person, either. His place was wholesome in appearance and the food of a good grade. We tried to engage him in conversation to see if he had any other pretty words in his vocabulary, but failed. So we wondered just why, and not until we came to settle did we find that "luncheonette" is a coined word and also a coin-word. As far as we could figure it adds about thirty-three and one-third per cent to the amount of the check.

If it wasn't for the little and the big problems of life there wouldn't be half so much said and half so much written. No sooner is one vexatious matter disposed of than up pops another. In this particular instance we refer to the matters of road construction and highway maintenance which cannot fail to interest everyone who is privileged to pass over the delightful roads to New England as a part of their summer diversions. The large buses, which this year have been far more numerous than ever, are doing things to the roads. Not that we have any fault to find with this system of transportation, but the character of these vehicles is such that they do things to the highways. For instance the Metropolitan District Commission has found it such a complex matter that it has decided that no vehicle carrying more than eight passengers shall be driven through the Metropolitan park system without a permit. One of the officials explained that it "just had to be done" because the big buses were almost monopolizing the thoroughfares. There appears to be no objection to them, for there is no reason why people who do not own cars should not have the privilege of riding in a bus for the purpose of enjoying the park system. The Boston Park Commissioners have taken a similar view of conditions and issued rules along the same lines. We are told that no one is refused a permit unless the commissioners are not satisfied that the vehicle will cover a definite route. There is objection to a bus roaming here and there and no doubt the objection is sound. The question that arises is what is to become of the roads. How long will they stand this extra heavy traffic and who is going to pay for the repairs? We regret that we are not able to solve this problem and thus win a place for ourselves in the Hall of Fame. Off hand, however, we think that until some better is offered that the advertisers whose large and glaring billboards are placed everywhere on the roads should pay the freight. Who is getting more benefit than they out of the roads? If the roads were not there these advertisers would not have their billboards built. And why are the billboards built? I wonder that the riding public may see them. We again suggest that the State pass the hat among the billboard advertisers.

It may be that we are a trifle behind the times in our observations of everyday life and if we demonstrate it by this paragraph (not to mention others) we most eagerly desire to be forgiven. But we did stumble on an interesting thing that had never struck us before and for that reason hasten to pass it to our readers. We found that a new game has found its way into American life. Strangely enough it was being played, not in the country, but in the city when we saw it in progress. The best of this game is that it can be played in a city or town or village by the side of a road. One needs no cars, no table, no checkers or materials of any kind. One needs only a pair of eyes and a tongue. The thing is to closely observe the automobile traffic. In fact the game is called "autopoker." It can be played by those who would scorn the suggestion of poker, or whist or even hearts. There is need only of a little of the gambling spirit. However, no stake need be put up but to wager an ice-cream soda, a box of candy or some other trifle does add to the enjoyment. "Auto poker" is played by taking the numbers of passing cars. The rules of poker are applied. For instance, one looks for a pair, three, two pair, a kind, a straight, or a full-house.

A flush is out of the question. The State registration doesn't matter in the least. All one needs to do is to see what kind of a poker hand the plate number contains. For instance, 48984 is two pair, with two eights and two fours. Again 75677, gives three sevens or three of a kind. But why go on. If one doesn't know the fundamentals of poker of course one needs instruction and what harm can there be in playing poker without cards. We saw two people who spent half-an-hour "picking off" the poker hands of passing automobiles. It got so interesting that we found ourselves glancing at every approaching car with increasing interest. Now, of course, there will be those who will say that it doesn't take much to amuse some people. Well why should it?

There are five votes in my family, and I can deliver them to any candidate for Mayor of Newton who will run on the platform outlined in your column in the Graphic, writes a reader who insists that his name be not disclosed. We wish to acknowledge this prompt response and early recognition of the need of such policies as those upon which we believe a local candidate may successfully base his ambitions. We want to say a word of caution to this correspondent. We note that he says he can deliver five votes in his family. He is to be congratulated. There is, however, something he should make sure of and that is his ability to control all the votes sheltered beneath his roof. We assume, and we happen to know it to be a fact that there are women members of his household. Unless he is a superman he is not going to be able to tell them how to mark their ballots by merely saying, "Vote for Soandso." That used to be the way it was done. Campaign cards and flyers always directed the voter as to how he should exercise the right of suffrage. We believe it worked very well when only men voted, but we have grave doubts about women accepting orders without reason. We believe that women prefer to select their own political favorites and that they are not going to be induced to vote the way the head of the family does. Now, whether a house should stand divided on the matter of a Mayoralty candidate is almost too great a question for brief discussion. Too much principle is involved, too much personal pride is at stake. It sounds very nice when we hear that a whole family voted one way, but we are apt to wonder if all the members of that household really were guided by their own best judgment. Of course it is good politics not to let anybody know for whom you are going to vote. But if the head of the family is happy in the belief that he carries in his vest pocket the votes of the rest of his family he should not be disillusioned. Some day, however, he may find out that he doesn't. And that day may come next December, at Newton's city election.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, July 29—With politicians talking about a reorganization of the government departments as a means of reducing taxes, people are wondering whether they really mean business. A Senate leader has declared that placing the government on a scientific basis would save $200,000,000 annually. There has been so much talk and so little action about these changes in the Federal service that the average citizen is a bit skeptical. Observers say that true economics can be worked out by giving constructive thought to the problem rather than discuss the subject noisily and superficially.

It is to be noted that the talk of reorganization of the government comes from administrative offices rather than the legislative branch. The prime mover in this remodeling process has been Secretary of Commerce Hoover. He has, however, countered many pitfalls and made little headway. It is now proposed to place the matter definitely in the hands of Congress for there is a limit on the authority of the President to transfer one bureau to another department. That Congress must give serious consideration to the subject of economies in the Federal service is indicated in the demands of the organized farmers for better business methods in the Post Office Department. Testimony was presented to a special congressional committee this week to the effect that the Post Office machinery could be overhauled and by the adoption of business principles the Department could be nearly self-sustaining.

Official Washington is rather dull during the summer months. The prediction made by the writer last week that the Tennessee evolution trial would soon find its place in national politics and in proposed legislation has been amply sustained by developments during the last few days. At the conclusion of the Dayton trial, Congressman Upshaw, of Georgia, a typical reformer, announced his advocacy of legislation of this sort. He was followed by Congressman Blanton, of Texas, when a government clerk filed a test case in the Courts of the District of Columbia to determine the Bible's place in the school system. As a result Washington will now be the center of religious turmoil for the man bringing the test case has declared himself an atheist. The question naturally arises as to whether this Federal employee is seeking a determination of the legal issues or just resorting to a cheap trick in obtaining notoriety. At least it is keeping Washington on the front page of the daily newspaper.

Back of the cut and dried technical discussion before the Interstate Commerce Commission here on the giant railroad mergers put over by the Van Sweringen Brothers, of Cleveland, Ohio, there is a true business romance existing. Instead of interesting financiers Federal inquiry into the circumstances surrounding those railroad consolidations would be more fascinating than fiction if the real facts were disclosed each day. The majority stockholders of a railroad purchased by the Van Sweringen Brothers are trying to show that the New York Central Railroad practically adopted them for tools in high finance. The lawyers are going into the personal history of these young men but are apparently showing wide of the mark. It was claimed that these financial wizards had planted an original investment of $520,000 and made it grow to $75,000,000. Later the official record was corrected showing that these figures had been exaggerated. These men started out selling real estate and branched off into building and buying railroads. During the testimony of O. P. Van Sweringen he resented the effort made by opposing counsel to show his tremendous profits. It was brought out that these clever young men in handling various transactions had never hagglad about prices but were content to leave the matter to a board of appraisers and then usually made a profit. They were constantly transferring their holdings and building up a great organization through clever financing schemes.

During an argument with the opposing counsel, Mr. O. P. Van Sweringen stated that they had made enough money in the last fifteen years to cease worrying about the size of their salaries as railroad executives. He said they looked upon the money that they had accumulated not as salaries and dividends but as raw material for building up great transportation systems.

D. 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your petition or any decree entered thereon, will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

those days a most prosperous business. It seems that Mrs. Treadway and Mrs. Stone were the real inheritors of that property, through their father, Mr. How of Sudbury, and the sons-in-law realized a goodly sum for their wives on the business.

Was this Nathaniel Treadway, by some chance, the ancestor of Congressman Treadway who gave farming implements to a Coolidge descendant in 1924? If so, it isn't such a far cry from fisheries to agriculture, even after nearly three hundred years!

In those days the fisheries of Watertown were such a substantial living that we are told that "in two tides we have gotten one hundred thousand fishes." So valuable were these weirs, indeed, that the Indians made excellent offers to Nathaniel Coolidge to get possession of them, but evidently Nathaniel did not want to sell to them—an indication that he had consideration for his township and for his neighbors. At a town meeting held April 1, 1671, it was voted "as one man" to keep the Indians from purchasing the weirs, for they were "bad neighbors." Think of it! They had had neighbors in those days, too! Which shows that we aren't so progressive after all!

A committee was sent to "treat" with Nathaniel Coolidge on the subject, with the result that the weirs became the property of the town, and were a source of big income to them for over a century. Which proves further that Nathaniel—like others of his name—was a man who could be met on fair and square grounds and was willing to be accommodating. The Coolidges who settled in New York—especially at Poughkeepsie—were the descendants of this man, and, surprisingly, Governor Carlos Coolidge of Vermont, who is not from the President's branch, although his ancestors went also to that State. An outstanding figure in Massachusetts, descended from Nathaniel, was Henry D. Coolidge of Concord, for so many years respected and beloved as Clerk of the Senate.

On May 7, 1691, John Coolidge, senior, died, at the age of 88, and on August 22—three months later—his wife Mary followed him, her age being the same as his. Someway, as I looked at those sturdy, oblong stones a few years ago, it was borne in upon me that she could not have lingered longer than that three months after he had left her, so had their loyal, splendid lives become welded. She must have been a very wonderful, helpful wife; a very understanding, wise mother, for both husband and her eight children made places for themselves in their communities, and they have passed on to each generation a pride in service and a sense of honor that has helped to uphold the towns in which they dwelt.

(Further stories of the President's ancestors of the Revolution and of other Coolidges who served in that conflict will appear in future editions).

ply on us and took us to the Tennessee launch. Once on board we learned that the ship was expected to take a Senator, three Congressmen, three newspaper men and some 21 naval reserves, and that some of us would have rather cramped quarters. Stephenson and I were assigned to a temporary stateroom, up two almost vertical ladders, and hardly large enough to hold our baggage. Fortunately Stephenson had arranged to stay ashore that night, so I had the alleged stateroom all to myself. On awakening the next morning I was almost ready to throw up the whole trip rather than stay in such uncomfortable quarters. I found, however, that a new arrangement had been made and both Stephenson and myself were assigned to individual staterooms, with plenty of room. The Senator also reneged on the trip, and thus gave us still more room for our party. The Congressmen dined with the Captain, and we three newspapermen with the senior officers in the wardroom. The Captain, Brooks Upham, was a real gentleman and made us feel right at home. He gave us his office in the stern of the ship for club room, and in numerous ways treated us in a most hospitable fashion. We later learned from other newspapermen that this was not universal in the fleet, and that some of the captains were very much on their dignity and refused to associate with their guests.

We had orders to sail from San Francisco at noon on Wednesday, and for that notable occasion, the usual fog, was not in evidence.

The fleet consisted of 10 battleships, nine light cruisers, 68 destroyers, 13 submarines, one aircraft tender, four submarine tenders, three destroyer tenders, one old type minelayer, two light minelayers, one aircraft tender, 10 minesweepers, six oilers, one repair ship, one hospital ship, one auxiliary ship and one transport carrying 1500 marines, representing two divisions of 42,000 marine officers and men. These 1500 marines with the 800 Blue fleet marines, made a total of 2300 actual troops.

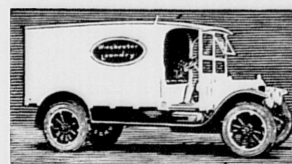

All but the battleships could pass directly to sea after leaving the Golden Gate, but the battleships on account of their larger draft had to keep to the channel, and made a right angle turn on leaving the harbor. It was a magnificent sight to see this great armada of Uncle Sam get under weigh and steam majestically on its path. The Tennessee was the second ship in line, and we had an excellent opportunity to see the entire fleet in motion. It was a most inspiring sight for every American, and we were deeply impressed with its potential power for peace, protection or punishment.

Late that afternoon, we went into a dense fog and it was remarkable that when the sun arose the next morning, the alignment of the battleships was exactly the same as in daylight the day previous. This was due to the fact that each ship towed a black and white spar at the stern and kept its rear searchlight on the spar, while the ship in the rear, kept its fore searchlight on the same spar.
